16 KILLED IN MINE BLAST, TWO MISSING

LITTLE HOPE THAT ANYONE ESCAPED

Explosion of Gas Pocket Caused by Spark From Drill Cutting Coal or Machine Short Circuit, One Worker Says.

By the Associated Press.

LOGAN, W. Va., March 12. — Rescuers who had brought seven bodies to the surface from the Macbeth Mine sent word this afternoon they had found the bodies of nine others killed by an explosion last night. Two other men are missing.

The rescue crews, working frantically since the explosion wrecked a large part of the pit more than two and one-half miles from the entrance, had to carry the bodies more than a half mile by hand, then two miles on cars.

Seven of the victims were identified as Joe Fry, 28 years old, a motorman; Troy McCoy, 25, brakeman; Floyd Fields, 30-year-old section boss; Mike Gimo, 44, Leonard Forbes, 30, loaders; R. B. Kimball, 36, a trackman, and Tony Podiska, 42, a loader.

Thinks All Were Killed.

Fred Tiller, one of the 120 employes at the mine, owned by the Hutchinson Coal Co., came to the surface with the bodies of Gimo and Forbes. Tiller, who had been in the mine 16 hours, said:

"I believe they all were killed by the terrible force of the explosion. They had been knocked against the mine side by flying timbers or buried by tons of slate. The car tracks even were torn up by the force."

Ten men were killed Sept. 2 by an explosion in the same mine.

Luther Thompson, a machine operator, expressed the opinion that a gas pocket in the pit had been ignited by a spark from a bit cutting coal, or by one from a short circuit on the machine.

Thompson estimated he was 1500 feet from the center of the explosion. He said he first felt a blast of air, then was knocked from his machine. He crawled about 2500 feet, found a motor and escaped with a companion.

H. P. Farley, in charge of the rescue operations for the State Bureau of Mines, said:

"Around the center of the blast the mine is badly torn. We are finding the bodies scattered in many places. Most of the victims apparently were killed outright by the explosion. The rescuers are extremely tired. It is taking two hours to take the bodies to the hoist."

Explosion After 8 p. m.

The explosion in the mine, eight miles over a rugged road east of Logan, occurred shortly after 8 p. m.

The bodies of Fry and McCoy were recovered before midnight.

Then began the task of cutting through piled debris and dodging falling roofs to the center of the explosion area.

The body of Fields was brought to the surface this morning. He had gone to work in the mine only three days before. He had a wife and three children.

Most of the crowd that gathered at dawn were men. The women, who had stood through most of the night, had returned home to get a little rest while waiting further word. The crowd was grouped behind a wire barrier patrolled by State police. There were a hundred or so persons, all silent. At noon the crowd had grown to 300. Most of the men regularly employed at the pit were working in shifts with rescuers.

Fresh crews constantly relieved the diggers and not for a moment did the tiresome work stop. Two crews of six men were able to work at the same time in the dark, shale-piled depths.

Twisted track, ripped-out trolley wires, splintered timbers, piles of coal, jagged slabs of slate and constantly falling debris from roofs were some of the things the men had to contend with.

Preliminary Opinion.

In the early hours of the rescue work the men were able to travel ahead without masks but as they neared the blast center it was necessary to put them on. The advance guard crawling over the

AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION VOTES SIX TO ONE AGAINST REMAKING SUPREME COURT

Association With 29,000 Members Polls 16,132 to 2563—Five Minor Items of Roosevelt Proposal Approved.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 12.—The American Bar Association last night announced a poll of its membership resulted in a vote of 16,132 to 2563 against President Roosevelt's proposal to remake the Supreme Court.

The vote on seven questions pertaining to the proposed change in the Federal judiciary was given as follows:

(1) On the proposal to authorize an increase in the number of Justices of the Supreme Court: For 2563, against, 16,132.

(2) On the proposal to authorize an increase in the number of Justices in the Circuit Courts of Appeals and the district courts: For, 4049; against, 14,401.

(3) On the proposal for additional authority in connection with the transfer of judges from one circuit or district to another: For, 11,462; against, 6837.

(4) On the proposal for a proctor for the Supreme Court: For, 10,707; against, 7414.

(5) On the proposal requiring notice to the Attorney-General in all cases involving constitutional questions: For, 10,637; against, 7613.

(6) On the proposal to allow the Attorney-General the right of direct appeal to the Supreme Court on constitutional questions: For, 11,397; against, 6852.

(7) On the proposal to extend to the Justices of the Supreme Court retirement privileges similar to those granted for many years to the judges of the Federal Court of Appeals and the district courts: For, 14,482; against, 3419.

(During the referendum this proposal was enacted into law.)

The association has a membership of 29,616. Of the 19,136 returns, 370 were voided because the signatures were missing.

Justice Edward T. Fairchild, chairman of the organization's Board of Elections, disclosed 19,136 ballots had been returned in the mail referendum.

Fairchild, a Justice of the Wisconsin Supreme Court, said the vote by states probably would be announced next week.

MO. PAC. TO SUE ESTATE OF O.P. VAN SWERINGEN

U. S. Judge Orders Trustee Thompson to Act to Recover "Large Losses."

Directions to file suit against the estate of the late O. P. Van Sweringen and four directors of the Missouri Pacific Railroad to recover "large losses" in the railroad's purchases of shares of its own stock through a subsidiary several years ago, were given by United States District Judge George H. Moore today to Guy A. Thompson, trustee of the railroad, who had sought the authority.

Directors to be sued were named in a supplementary report by Fred L. Williams, special counsel for the trustee, as Leonard P. Ayres, G. A. Tomlinson, John Sherwin and Alva Bradley, all of Cleveland, O.

The report said that in 1930 and 1931 the Missouri Pacific advanced $2,827,000 to its subsidiary, the Missouri Pacific Transportation Co., for purchase, under direction of Van Sweringen, of 11,300 shares of Missouri Pacific common and 23,500 shares of preferred. The purchases resulted in heavy losses.

It appeared doubtful, the report said, whether suit against the Van Sweringen estate alone would be justified on the basis of any recovery since indications were that the estate likely would be shown to have assets of only about $600,000 to meet claims likely to exceed $60,000,000. However, no accurate knowledge of the value of the estate was as yet available, it was stated.

Attorney Williams expressed no opinion as to the liability of L. W. Baldwin of St. Louis, operating head of the railroad, who was president and a director at the time of the stock transactions. He pointed out that he had been special counsel for Baldwin, as well as Thompson, when Baldwin was co-trustee and suggested that advice of independent counsel be obtained. Judge Moore appointed Roscoe Anderson as independent counsel.

At a hearing here in 1935, Baldwin testified that he did not know of the stock purchase plan until it had been put into operation by Van Sweringen. He added that he regarded Van Sweringen as the boss of the Missouri Pacific after Van Sweringen acquired substantial control and became chairman of the board in May, 1930.

Williams said there was no evidence that six men who were directors at the time of the share purchases had knowledge of the use to which the advances were to be put. He named these as John R. Flippin, William T. Kemper, William W. Reiley, John G. Lonsdale, Henry G. Dalton and Fred T. Hilvert. These directors, he said, stated they understood the advances were to be used in expanding the bus business of the subsidiary. Minutes of directors' meetings, it was pointed out, did not disclose the purpose of the advances.

INTERNAL FASCIST PLOT BROKEN UP IN MADRID

Plan to Kidnap Loyalist Leader, Gen. Miaja, Alleged—30 Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, March 12.—An internal "Fascist organization" which planned to kidnap Gen. Jose Miaja, commander of Madrid's defense forces, has been broken up by police, the Government announced today.

The leader of the Fascist "Fifth Column," in sympathy with the insurgent General, Francisco Franco, was Exuperio Munoz Gonzalez, the announcement said. More than 30 members of the group were arrested while insurgent shells were falling in Madrid's central district.

Government authorities asserted the "Fifth Column" had planned to create disturbances inside Madrid to aid the insurgent attackers outside the city limits.

In addition to the kidnaping, the Fascist group was planning to assassinate several prominent Government officials, the authorities charged. They also had drawn plans to seize San Anton prison and free all political prisoners, it was declared.

The plotters were said to have accumulated stores of arms and ammunition in "veritable arsenals" and had planned to pass out guns to their supporters at the proper moment for an uprising in the capital.

Several women were among those arrested.

259 AUTO LICENSE ARRESTS

All but 18, who had not purchased drivers' licenses, were given Police Court summons and permitted to proceed. The 18 were taken to police stations and obtained releases on $500 bonds.

SPANISH REBELS KEEP UP ADVANCE IN GUADALAJARA

Move Forward Two Miles and Reach Trijueque, 12 Miles From Capital of Province.

COGOLLUDO ALSO FALLS TO FASCISTS

Madrid Does Not Deny Reverses, but Reports Franco's Offensive Has Been Flattened Out.

By the Associated Press.

SORIA, Spain, March 12.—Gen. Francisco Franco's Fascist troops machine-gunned and shelled heavily massed Government forces today, fighting their way forward yard by yard into Trijueque, 44 miles northeast of Madrid and 12 miles northeast of Guadalajara.

Heavy casualties were reported in the close formations of Madrid's defenders. Many prisoners were taken, a rebel communique said, including two Italian Communist officers of a unit called the Garibaldi battalion.

A two-mile advance brought the main body of insurgents into Trijueque over the road which traverses Guadalajara Province and ends at Madrid.

About 20 miles north of Guadalajara city, a second insurgent column moved southward, cleaning up the right flank of the foremost body on the western end of the line. It took the important town of Cogolludo, nine miles west of Jadraque, which was occupied Wednesday, and the nearby villages of Veguillas, Monasterio and Membrillara.

REBEL ARTILLERY FIRES ON MADRID

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, March 12.—Insurgent artillery fired again on this beleaguered capital today. Shells exploded in the Gran Via, an important thoroughfare, and struck buildings in one section of the city. Several persons were reported hit.

Government batteries inside the capital began to return the insurgent fire as shelling of the city's central district became heavier.

One shell fell into a cafe, upsetting tables, chairs and dishes and wounding several persons. Pedestrians in the business section fled into basements.

In the face of combined assaults by artillery, planes, mechanized units and waves of infantrymen and machine gunners, Madrid's forces were reported to have forced a flattening out of the insurgent offensive along a 23-mile front in Guadalajara Province.

Four Italian columns were forced to change from a closely-integrated unit of narrow front into a broader and more vulnerable organization, Government strategists declared.

In view of the Government's stubborn resistance, the loyalists said, the attackers made no further efforts to advance on the direct route to Guadalajara.

Many insurgents were killed and wounded in Southern Spain, it was reported from Andujar, when they attacked Villanueva del Duque, Jaen Province.

Rebels Besieged on Mountain Beaten Back in Food Raid.

By the Associated Press.

ANDUJAR, Spain, March 12.—Three hundred insurgents, who with their women and children have been besieged in a mountain sanctuary for months, failed today in an attempt to raid a Government food depot. Two Government troopers were wounded in the fighting as they beat back the insurgents.

The 300 have depended on a group of young insurgent aviators to drop food on the mountain peak. The insurgent planes, however, failed to show up recently.

The sanctuary, that of the Virgin de la Cabaza, is 70 miles behind the Government lines in Jaen Province.

At the start of the civil war last July, insurgents from Andujar, Marmelejo and Linares took their families with their arms and as many supplies as they could carry to the sanctuary on a peak of the Sierra Morena.

Jaen Province was in the hands of Government troops. Several times in the first few months of the war Government militiamen tried to reach the sanctuary, but each attack was repulsed.

The sanctuary, containing a statue of the Virgin, stands on a peak 1200 feet above the surrounding hills. Only one road leads to it—a tortuous highway commanded from the base of the peak to the top by sharpshooters on the tiny plateau above.

For months, the insurgent command knew nothing of the 300 defenders. Last November, three men from the sanctuary ran

BOND CONTINUED PENDING APPEAL

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old-age pension promoter, was sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $100 today for contempt of the House of Representatives.

When sentence was pronounced by United States District Judge Peyton Gordon, Townsend said "Thank you, sir." His attorney announced the case would be appealed. Justice Gordon continued Townsend's $1000 bond, pending the appeal.

Later Townsend issued a statement defending his pension plan and saying, "Try as they can to imprison me, they can't imprison that idea."

He was convicted recently by a court jury on one of two counts resulting from his walking out of a House committee hearing on the Townsend $200-a-month pension plan last July.

New Trial Refused.

Elisha Hanson, Townsend's attorney, had asked for a new trial, but Justice Gordon denied the motion today, and imposed the minimum sentence. He explained the law required both a jail term and a fine.

Townsend's release on bond was opposed by United States District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, who said a Supreme Court decision has laid down the rule no bail should be permitted after a conviction unless a serious question of law is involved.

In his statement, Townsend said: "I stand convicted before a United States District Court of violating an act of Congress in failing to appear before a committee before which I did appear. However . . . I feel certain that before the bar of public opinion I am guiltless of any wrong doing. . . . I would do the same thing again tomorrow should the occasion arise, under similar circumstances."

He attacked the congressional investigation as "persecution."

Why He "Revolted."

Another congressional committee, he said, had read statements by J. P. Morgan, the banker, and Richard Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange, but he declared the committee before which he appeared would not listen to his statement.

"I realized that I, as the representative of millions of people, though they be poor and needy, was not to have the same privilege accorded to me that was accorded to the money bags of the nation.

"It was then I revolted. I told this committee that I would not further stand for the sort of inquisition and persecution that had taken place and walked out."

Two of Townsend's aids, John B. Kiefer of Chicago, and Clinton B. Wunder of New York, pleaded guilty to the same contempt charge of which Townsend was convicted but were given suspended sentences after apologizing to the House.

THEY ASK HIM ABOUT FORMING OF ORGANIZATION BACKING SCHEME

Former Judge J. P. Devaney Defends Roosevelt Proposal and Asserts Public Respect for Judiciary Is at Very Low Ebb.

QUESTIONED ABOUT DAMAGE SUIT CASES

He Agrees He Handled "Good Many" Before Going on Minnesota Bench — He Calls Proposal 'Conservative.'

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Opponents of President Roosevelt's court plan on the Senate Judiciary Committee again subjected a "defense witness" to severe attack today, seeking in every way possible to discredit the administration plan. The hearing was then adjourned until Monday morning.

The deep feeling stirred by the proposal was shown from time to time, particularly by those members of the committee who have become leaders of the opposition.

The witness today was John Patrick Devaney who recently resigned as Chief Justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court to accept the presidency of the recently formed National Lawyers' Guild. Devaney read a lengthy statement which in general followed the line taken by Attorney-General Cummings and his assistant, Robert H. Jackson.

Flurry Over Burke's Question.

When he concluded, Senator Burke (Dem.), Nebraska, perhaps the most outspoken critic of the administration program, sought by inference to show that Devaney was a damage suit lawyer and therefore opposed to the lawyers who make up the American Bar Association. Other members of the committee including Chairman Ashurst, resented Burke's inference and drew from the Nebraskan a denial that he had sought to discredit the witness.

Senator O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming, tried as he has with each preceding witness, to get Devaney to say that it would be futile to enlarge the Supreme Court because the same "split" decisions could result in the court whether it was composed of nine or 15 members. O'Mahoney yesterday introduced a constitutional amendment which would require a two-thirds vote by the Supreme Court in declaring a law unconstitutional.

Reply to Old Argument.

"You referred," O'Mahoney said, "to the difficulties that have been encountered in adopting the child labor amendment. But I think that the reasons for that are obvious since it would give to the Federal Government power to 'regulate or control' the labor of children under 18. And I say that although I advocate adoption of the amendment by the Legislature of my own state, I believe it would be relatively simple to secure adoption of such an amendment as I have put forward."

Devaney, like the two other administration witnesses who have been heard, insisted that adoption of an amendment would be difficult or impossible, first because of conflicting views on the character of the amendment to be submitted to the states and secondly because of the ease with which it could be blocked in 13 or more Legislatures.

"The Moving Spirits."

Senator Norris and others plied Devaney with questions about the formation of the Lawyers' Guild.

"Who was the moving spirit in bringing this group together?" Senator King (Dem.) of Utah asked.

"I was one," Devaney replied. "Frank P. Walsh of New York was another. Morris Ernst was another."

"It was formed after the Pres-

JOHN L. LEWIS BUYS HOUSE MORE HISTORIC THAN FIRST

Adds to Dismay of Society Whose Tour Was Disrupted by Member's Objection.

By the Associated Press.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., March 12.—To the dismay of the Rectors' Aid Society of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, John L. Lewis filed today the deed to a second home here, the Richard R. Fendall home, considered more historic even than the one he now occupies.

The society recently postponed its annual public tour of Alexandria historic homes, after Mrs. Bernice Flemming Holland had served notice that if the tour included Lewis' home, it could not include hers.

Lewis and his family now live in the home of George Washington's physician. The house he has bought is reputed to be the one in which "Light Horse" Harry Lee made his oration on the death of Washington, and in which Washington's friends planned his funeral.

ROBBER KILLS WOMAN ON CHICAGO STREET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 12.—A robber stopped Mrs. Mary Irwin and her young daughter at Fifty-seventh and Troy streets last night and demanded the mother's money. Before she could comply, resist or even scream for help, he shot her to death. Eight minutes later, and less than three blocks away, he held up two other women.

Mrs. Irwin, 39 years old, wife of Policeman Robert Irwin, was the mother of two children, Mary, 13 years old, and Robert Jr., 14. Mary witnessed the killing, the most wanton in Chicago in years.

Mrs. Irwin and Mary were on their way home from a visit with friends, when the robber surprised them.

"He didn't give mother a chance to scream even," sobbed Mary.

Mrs. Irwin was shot at 9:12. At 9:20, the robber leaped out of an alley two blocks away and stopped Miss Marione Julien, 22 years old, and Miss Ethel Kuzora, 23.

"Girls, this is a stick up," he said. "I just want your purses. If you try anything funny I'll shoot."

Miss Kuzora turned and fled, but Miss Julien stood still. The man took her purse containing $10 and a yellow fountain pen and disappeared in the alley. Miss Julien and Miss Kuzora gave a detailed description of the man that was similar to but more complete than Mary Irwin's.

NORRIS DUBIOUS OF WISDOM OF REMAKING COURT

Says Constitution Should Be Amended to Give the Government Broader Powers.

PROPOSES CHANGE IN JUDICIARY RULE

Wants Congress to Specify Number of Justices Who Must Concur to Invalidate Law.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Senator Norris, Independent Progressive of Nebraska, presented to the Senate today his own comprehensive plan for reorganization of the judicial branch of the Government. He admitted the constitutional legality of President Roosevelt's proposal to appoint six new Justices to the Supreme Court but at the same time added that "there may be serious question as to the wisdom of such a course."

Basing his premise on the constitutional provision that Congress shall have authority to regulate the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, Norris argued that Congress could specify by statute that a certain number of Justices should concur before an act of Congress could be invalidated. This is a viewpoint different from that of the White House stategists who insist that the Supreme Court might rely on the British common law to hold that historical practice required only a majority of the court.

Favors Amending Constitution.

Mere legislative action, however, is not enough, Norris contended. He insisted that the Constitution should be amended to give the Federal Government broad powers to limit hours in industry as well as the conditions of human labor, and that Congress should have similar powers to treat agriculture as a national and not as a local problem. He spoke specifically for his own plan to limit the term of all Federal Judges to a definite term and called the proposed amendment of Senators Wheeler and Bone "very important."

He said he could see no reason why Congress should not pursue its legislative remedies and the amendment remedy at the same time.

The Proposed Remedies.

As to the legislative remedies, he said that Congress had "undisputed" power to enact the following legislation:

(1) To take away from inferior courts the power to declare an act of Congress unconstitutional. If Congress exercised this authority, it would naturally follow that the Supreme Court would likewise be deprived of authority to declare such acts unconstitutional, because the authority to do so depends upon its appellate jurisdiction, and there would be no way for such a case to reach the Supreme Court.

(2) To limit in any way it saw fit the power of the lower court in acting upon constitutional questions. It could take away all jurisdiction of the present inferior courts and set up a new court having exclusive and original jurisdiction of constitutional questions.

(3) To provide that the judgment of this new court should be exclusive and final, or to provide a method by which constitutional questions could be taken on appeal from such court to the Supreme Court.

(4) To require that in all cases, in whatever court the question might be raised, the Government should be made a party to the suit, and given an opportunity to be heard.

Would Change Majority Rule.

(5) To regulate and make exceptions to the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and to provide by law that no act of Congress should be held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, unless such judgment should be concurred in by a number of Justices specified in the act.

(6) To regulate and make exceptions to the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in any way it saw fit.

(7) To provide that no injunction or temporary restraining order shall be issued setting aside an act of Congress as unconstitutional, except upon the giving of an adequate bond to protect all parties interested from damage, and to provide that such bond shall continue in force and effect until the case is finally adjudicated in the Appellate Court.

(8) To provide by statute for the increase of the number of justices, either of the Supreme Court, or of any inferior court.

Outlook for Norris Proposals.

Norris is a former chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and his proposals will have considerable weight with the Senate if, as is expected, there is serious consideration of a compromise on the President's proposal. Although he has been listed as "non-committal" on the remaking of the court, he has been counted on by the Roosevelt forces as one who would eventually vote for the plan. He said today that his speech was written before the President took Congress by surprise with his special message and the accompanying White House bill.

Speaking in behalf of his own plan for a constitutional amendment for the appointment of judges for specific terms rather than life, Norris asserted that while the present system "is a very beautiful theory," it did not work in practice.

"Judges, after all, are only men," he continued. "The elevation of a man to the bench, even though it be for life, does not give him any attributes of divinity. He still has all the imperfections of humanity. He still retains his prejudices, his viewpoint, his likes and his dislikes. In other words, he has all the virtues, and all the infirmities he possessed before he went on the bench. The luxury of his new surroundings naturally has a tendency to cause him to forget the trials and tribulations and the hardships that beset the ordinary, common individual.

"No Perfect Court."

"There is no perfect man, and therefore there can be no perfect court. If a judge, endowed with unlimited and absolute power, with a tenure of office for life, and and without there being any appeal from his decision, makes a mistake, however honestly and conscientiously it may have been made, he thereby sets up a permanent law, the burdens and wrongs of which must be borne by generations yet unborn.

"Such machinery in our Government is a relic of the absolute monarchy that prevailed before the dawn of civilization. Such a doctrine is abhorrent in a democracy. There is no man, however great, however honest, however conscientious, however wise, who ought to be entrusted for life with absolute authority, where there is no appeal from his decision. It is true, our Constitution can be amended. But such method is long, uncertain, and requires the most unanimous consent of the entire country. There is no practical remedy to correct the mistakes of the Supreme Court. If, by amendment, we would take away the life tenure of office, we would do no injury to anyone, and we would take away from our judiciary this relic of the absolute monarchy and restore the beneficient virtues of democracy."

Argument for Amendment.

Norris was less specific but just as ardent in his support of proposals to give Congress national powers over the relations of capital and labor and over agriculture.

"Some law, national in its scope, regulating the hours and conditions of labor, is a positive necessity," Norris declared. "Congress, representing the nation, is the only power that can deal effectively with this question. Under the decisions of our Supreme Court, it is very doubtful whether Congress has the constitutional authority to pass a law on this subject which would be effective in bringing about a remedy from the present intolerable situation.

"An amendment to the Constitution, giving this power to Congress, is a practical necessity. We have been trying to deal with the unemployment situation from the very beginning of the depression.

"We have not yet provided a permanent remedy, and in my humble judgment we never will settle this question permanently until we have a national law which will limit the hours as well as the conditions of human labor.

Problem of Agriculture.

"Agriculture is perhaps the greatest of all our industries. A prosperous agriculture is absolutely necessary to the happiness of our people and the prosperity of our nation. When agriculture languishes, then prosperity disappears. Those who produce the food we eat must have not only the cost of production, but a reasonable profit, as well. All our people, whatever may be their calling in life, depend for their happiness and their prosperity upon a successful agriculture.

"Congress has tried in vain to give relief to this subject. The Supreme Court has nullified all such attempts. If the decisions of the court remain, then it is absolutely imperative that Congress be given authority by an amendment to the Constitution to meet this situation.

"Notwithstanding the decisions of the most fundamental of all our industries, it is not local; it is national in its scope, any assertion from any body of men, however great, to the contrary notwithstanding."

"Intolerable Situation."

If the legislative and constitutional amendment proposals are not pursued, Norris told the Senate, and the opposition to them is successful, the pendulum will swing farther "To the other side than progressive thinking men and women are advocating at this time."

"The present intolerable situation cannot go on indefinitely," he concluded, "and unless some reasonable degree of control is brought about, those who seek to prevent any innovation will find themselves in the end in a situation where all authority of any court to declare an act of Congress unconstitutional will be taken away."

The Senate Chamber was only about a third filled as Norris read his speech slowly and with emphasis, but without the oratorical flourishes so often present when a Senator speaks on a constitutional topic. The early part of his address was studded with citations from decisions of the court, which, he said, sustained his position that the court itself recognized that Congress had power to limit the appellate jurisdiction of the courts. He admitted that Chief Justice Hughes, in his book "The Supreme Court of the United States," written during the interim when he was in private life, cast doubt on this view, and observed that it appeared that the Chief Justice had not given the question more than 'superficial examination."

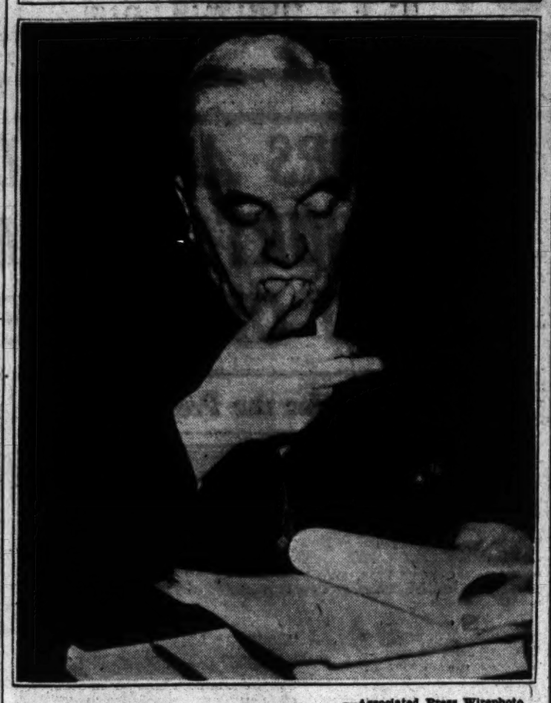

"What the Chief Justice said," Norris commented, "certainly should have no more weight than obiter dictum in an ordinary case."

A large part of the speech was devoted to the recent actions of the lower courts in granting injunctions to private power companies against Government owned or financed projects.

These injunctions, Norris said, led him to propose that parties applying for an injunction should be required to furnish bond to cover possible damages, and that the United States should be made a party to a suit whenever an act of Congress was involved.

WARRANT FOR WITNESS IN VOTE FRAUD TRIAL

Old Charge Revived Against Kansas Citian After He Testifies for Government.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 12.—A warrant was issued by the office of the Prosecuting Attorney of Jackson County today against Thomas H. Cummins, Republican captain in the Nineteenth Precinct of the Twelfth Ward and one of the Government's principal witnesses in the vote fraud case in United States District Court.

Cummins was accused of escaping from a county convict quarry gang more than 13 years ago when serving a 90-day sentence on a statutory charge.

It was not until he testified against "the machine" in Federal court, he told the writer today, that any attention was paid to his youthful indiscretion.

The guard from whom he escaped, he said, had seen him frequently since then and conversed with him cordially at the Federal Building yesterday a few hours before the issuance of the warrant. A Jackson County Deputy Sheriff was with the guard.

At the request of the prosecutor's office, headed by W. W. Graves, a brother of Ludwick Graves, of defense counsel in the vote fraud trial, records of Justice of the Peace Courts in Independence and Lees Summit were examined, but no additional convictions were found against Cummings.

The State Department of Mines issued a preliminary opinion that ignition of a gas pocket caused the explosion. A complete investigation will be started when the last man has been brought out.

Miner John Bodnar sidestracked his mine locomotive and saved his life.

The 24-year-old motorman was on his way out of the mine, his trick ended. Fry and McCoy came along on another motor, pulling a string of empties. Bodnar switched into another heading to wait for them to pass.

Scarcely had they gone on when the terrific blast swept the mine and Fry and McCoy were hurled to their deaths.

"The power went off and the lights went out," Bodnar said. "I jumped from my motor and ran all the way to the outside. It must have been a mile and a half.

"I guess I was the first man out of the mine. I wasn't hurt—but I was scared and scared a plenty. That other one (explosion) last September was too fresh in my mind.

"I was through work, of course, but if I had gone on down the main track I guess I wouldn't be here."

through Government lines to tell a story of rationed supplies and lack of medicine and first aid equipment.

Insurgent aviators from Seville promptly loaded supplies on bombers and tried to drop them on the tiny platteau near the sanctuary. The wind carried the supplies into the hands of the Government troops.

Two days later, aviators went back, this time safely dropping food encased in the shells of large air bombs. Thereafter, the rebel flyers flew over the peak and dropped supplies, rain or shine, twice a week.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, March 12.—Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, one of the largest independent producers in the industry, announced wage increases today for its 2500 salaried employes.

The increases, graduated as high as 15 per cent for white collar workers earning less than $2500 a year, become effective March 16.

The corporation previously had granted a 10 cents an hour pay advance for its 23,500 mill laborers, reduction of the work week from 48 to 40 hours and a week's vacation with pay for all employes with five or more years' service.

London Banks Said to Have Taken 50 Pct. of $225,000,000 Installment.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 12.—The office of Premier Leon Blum announced today the first installment of the defense loan — 5,000,000,000 francs (about $225,000,000)—had been oversubscribed. Subscription lists were immediately closed.

Today's subscription represents approximately half of the total loan of 10,500,000,000 francs ($479,850,000) approved by Parliament. Information available indicated there had been no subscription by American banks.

Financial sources reported London banks were taking up half of the installment and French banks were receiving many orders in view of the high interest offered—4½ per cent.

Senators Assail Court Plan Defense

ident announced his plan, was it not?" King asked.

"No," Devaney said, "the move to organize the guild had been started before."

"But the meeting to organize it was held after the President's announcement, was it not?"

Devaney replied in the affirmative. The meeting was held about three weeks ago in Washington. It was reported at the time that the organization had been formed with the express purpose of backing President Roosevelt's plan.

He Objects to Packing.

"There is no excuse, is there, for packing the Supreme Court if the people of a single state should happen not to approve a decision of the court?" King demanded.

"I could not agree with you as to the use of the word 'packing'," Devaney said. "Perhaps one might speak of 'unpacking' as well as of 'packing' the court."

As the interrogation of Devaney continued, Norris, unaware that he was so close to the amplifying apparatus, sat snapping a rubber band against a packet of papers. It made a noise like a drum and an undertone of laughter spread throughout the room.

There were complaints from several Senators that they could not hear and Chairman Ashurst, as he has done on previous days, requested members of the committee to raise their voices.

Dust Bowl and Constitution.

King took up the points made by President Roosevelt in his first speech in defense of the court proposal with regard to barriers raised by the court against social legislation.

"There is nothing in the Constitution that would prevent appropriations for the dust bowl, is there?" King asked. "No," Devaney replied.

Senator Burke next took up the questioning, asking Devaney about his private practice before he went on the Minnesota bench.

"My impression is that you handled a great many damage suits. Is that right?" "Yes, I handled a good many damage suits," Devaney said.

Burke asked if Devaney was devoting his time "rather exclusively" to the court proposal and the witness answered in the negative. He also denied that any organization was underwriting his expenses.

Chairman Ashurst, resenting Burke's reference to damage suit practice by Devaney, said that "every lawyer on this committee has taken damage suits."

Devaney Attacks 'Infallibility' Idea, 'Mystery' of Court.

Devaney, in his opening statement, told the committee that the "mass of lawyers" was not represented by the official polls taken by various bar associations throughout the country. He charged that there had been a "conspiracy" to prevent the country from knowing what the real function and nature of the Supreme Court was.

"In most of the vital constitutional cases," Devaney declared, repeating what others have said in defense of the President's program, "it is the individual Justices who speak and not the Constitution."

Speaking both as an individual and as head of the Lawyers' Guild, Devaney was emphatic in his approval of the administration plan. He resigned from the Minnesota court only a short time ago to become head of the guild.

"From every point of view," Devaney told the committee, "the President's proposal is by far the most conservative remedy available to meet the needs of the public at the present time with the least disturbance to the continuity of our legal traditions and to the preservation of constitutional democracy. It keeps the Constitution intact. It keeps the powers of our courts intact. It keeps the legal profession administering the law along the lines it has known."

"Respect at Low Ebb."

Devaney contended that "the integrity and continuity of our legal system depends upon public respect for our courts and lawyers."

Asserting that this respect was now "at a very low ebb," he added. "If any group in the country stands in real danger of being taken to the whipping post, it is the lawyers, and if the lawyer and his courts are taken to the whipping post a long pentup resentment against them insures that they won't be let off as easily as even the banker during the depression.

"Over the last 40 years, certain leaders in the legal profession and certain interests whom those leaders protected, through the courts, against the wishes and needs of the public, have built up a dangerous myth about courts in general and the Supreme Court in particular.

Court "Exploits" Mystery.

"Ever since popular election of Senators removed the protection which ultra-conservative character of the Senate gave to certain classes in the community, the Supreme Court has been carefully built up as a subject of unquestioning veneration.

"It is a creditable aspect of human nature that it wants some object of veneration, and veneration to no small degree thrives on mystery and mysticism.

"But a majority of the court in the last four years has been exploiting the mystery which so largely enveloped the court. There has been a deliberate effort not to let the country understand what the real function of the Supreme Court is, and how, for a long stretch of years, the Supreme Court has been exercising that function."

Rank and File Spokesman.

Devaney urged that "we frankly recognize them (the Justices) as the heart of our political system when they exercise judicial review of laws." This attitude, he said, would lead to "less public disappointment in them."

"The danger of building a legal system upon a myth of impersonal infallibility," he said, "is that when the myth crumbles in disillusion, the whole legal system may be irreparably injured."

Describing himself as "a spokesman for the rank and file of lawyers of the country," Devaney urged enactment of the President's bill to preserve "the Constitution from the court and the court from itself."

Defending the constitutionality of the bill, he said there was "nothing in the President's proposals which will impair the independence of the new Justices, or silence the voices of the old Justices."

Type of Justices Critics Fear.

Devaney quoted Frederick H. Stinchfield, president of the American Bar Association, as noting that six new justices together with the three liberals now on the court, would make a majority.

"So it is quite clear," he added, "that what such critics really fear is that the President will appoint men of the type, character and ability of Justices Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo rather than men who share the economic views of the leaders of the American Bar Association and who could be counted upon to vote with the present conservative majority of the court."

Committee members then took up the questioning of the witness, but when they began straggling from the room at noon, Chairman Ashurst adjourned the session and scheduled further hearings for Monday.

What Burke's Poll Shows.

Senator Burke, perhaps the bitterest of all the President's Democratic opponents, today showed to opposition leaders a confidential poll in which 40 Senators were listed against the President's proposal. Only 31 were shown in this poll as committed for the administration plan.

The Burke poll showed 16 in the neutral bloc leaning toward the proposal and nine tending toward the opposition. If all of the 16 should finally vote with the administration this would give a total of only 47 votes, two less than the majority necessary to put the bill over.

There was plain today a flagging of interest, in marked contrast to the tension that prevailed when the hearings opened with the appearance of Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings. The whole court issue has been so debated and argued prior to consideration by the committee that it is plain that little that is new will be put into the record even though it is probable that the hearings will continue for many days or even weeks.

Borah Thinks Hearing Futile.

Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho, a leader of the group opposed to the President, announced some time ago that he believed the hearings to be entirely futile. While he attended the first day, and participated in the questioning, he indicated he would not devote very much time in the future to the sessions of the committee.

Today's hearing opened as reports of a new compromise plan were heard. This is under discussion among Senators who have not yet taken a stand on the President's proposal and who hope to avoid a final showdown vote on the scheme to add six new Justices to the court.

There are two phases of the newest compromise plan. The first is a constitutional amendment which would provide for the compulsory retirement of all Federal judges at the age of 72 and would also provide that the Supreme Court could not hold a law unconstitutional except by a majority of at least seven votes. The second phase of the plan provides for the addition of two new justices by law instead of the six called for in the President's bill.

Strategy of Bloc.

A number of Senators in the neutral bloc are reported favorable to such a plan. It is their strategy, if they can gain sufficient adherents, to go to Senator Robinson, Majority Floor Leader, and inform him that they will go that far and no farther. Since the votes necessary for passage of any plan are in this bloc, the administration would have to yield to such an ultimatum.

On the other hand White House strategists who have been most active in working for the bill claim 56 votes beyond any doubt in the Senate for the President's reorganization measure. This would be more than enough to put the measure over.

AMERICAN BAR PRESIDENT AGAIN CRITICISES ROOSEVELT

Stinchfield Says Chief Executive Wants Government Without Any Constitutional Control.

By the Associated Press.

DULUTH, Minn., March 12.—Frederick H. Stinchfield, president of the American Bar Association, in an address here last night said President Roosevelt "wants a legislative form of government and not a constitutional type of control."

Speaking before a bar association meeting, he said under the President's Supreme Court plan "the judiciary is to be not a third branch of the Government, but a mere attachment to the other two branches of government."

The necessary consequence of the President's proposal, Stinchfield added, will be an all-powerful central government with the rights of the states entirely subordinated to Congress and the executive.

"Present experience teaches us that with a very popular president the legislative branch will amount to very little," he continued, "and that all power, therefore, will be centered in the executive department."

"When a majority of the people, under whatever stress, either war or depression, want in their excitement particular laws," he continued, "the President would give those laws to them . . . no matter what the stress or how impossible it was for a majority of the people at the moment to exercise wise judgment."

BALLOT PHOTOS HELP SHOW FRAUD IN KANSAS CITY

"THAT CONVICTS US," DEFENDANT SAYS

Witness Testifies He Found Evidence of Erasure of Republican Marks, Substitution of Democratic.

By SPENCER R. McCULLOCH,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 12.—Physical evidence showing that ballots were forged on a wholesale scale in a residential precinct here at the last national election was introduced today by the Government as it completed its case against eight precinct officials and political workers charged with conspiracy to corrupt the ballot. The prosecution rested at 2:30 o'clock.

William G. Boatright, chief of defense counsel, delivered his opening statement which he waived at the beginning of the trial. He said the defense would try to impeach the testimony of T. H. Cummins by attacking his credibility as a witness by showing he possesses a criminal record and is "a fugitive from justice."

"No U. S. Law Against It."

Boatright pointed out that the defendants are charged with conspiracy. Evidence of the Government, he conceded, has tended to show "certain defendants were guilty of irregularities in violation of the State laws."

"But they are not on trial for allowing ghosts to walk," Boatright said, "or stuffing the ballot box or altering votes. There is no United States law against it."

The Government's tell-tale evidence, presented in United States District Court, consisted of the actual ballots and photographic enlargements of some manipulated ballots prepared by a Federal handwriting expert who examined all of about 500 ballots registered from the Nineteenth precinct of the Twelfth Ward.

The witness, C. A. Appel, who has appeared in more than 200 cases all over the country including the last vote fraud trial here, began his testimony shortly before recess yesterday evening and was on the stand when court convened today.

Appel testified this morning that 30 Democratic ballots were marked by the same man. Motion pictures of these ballots were then shown in the court room, showing individual characteristics in the marks. Appel said many erasures occurred in the poll books and numerous substitutions of names and addresses were made.

Heated Cross-Examination.

During a heated cross-examination the expert pointed out he could not always tell if a number of cross marks were made by the same individual but could do so if that individual's mark possessed distinctive characteristics. The conditions under which the marking was done also affect the situation, Appel said.

Appel agreed to make a test, suggested by defense lawyers, although remarking, "If you are going to get cross marks from someone interested in the case they would change them."

All of the defendants except Gilbert Stevens, the Democratic precinct captain and the two women who pleaded nolo contendere, then made cross marks which Appel compared with ballots which had been switched.

He then reported that "allowing for the fact the cross mark could have been disguised," he did not observe a similarity in the five cases examined although one was designated as "inconclusive."

Stevens was put in the picture a few minutes later when L. J. Fallon, a Federal finger print expert, testified his fingerprints were on a ballot cast by someone else. The ballot was one of those "switched" from Republican to Democratic.

Fingerprints of John T. Little, a Democratic judge and a defendant, were then identified as appearing on the altered poll books. Indelible ink prints made it clear, Fallon related.

The Government used its final material witness to show the existence of vote padding in the precinct. The witness was Mrs. Lillian Julian, who was registered and recorded as voting, although she testified she was in California at registration time and did not vote at the national election.

Mrs. Julian testified she visited the polls after "Democratic friends" had "kidded" her about being voted. She asserted that Joseph Hobdy, one of the defendants, a political worker, called her to one side and told her she had been voted. Mrs. Julian described herself as a Democrat.

Photographs Show Fraud.

Illustrating his remarks with photographs Appel yesterday literally gave voice to "the silent witnesses of the ballot box." His exposition was designed to impartially clinch the testimony of witnesses who told of seeing ballots "marked" by unauthorized persons and of blank ballots being removed from a pile.

Indentations in more than 50 ballots, Appel testified, producing photographs to illustrate specific examples, indicated the ballots were in a pile as they were marked instead of being handled separately as would have been the case had they been voted legitimately by the individual voter.

The depressions clearly showed the ballots were superimposed. Pencil marks placed over the Democratic column on a ballot at the top of the heap would be reflected by indentations on ballots under the one being forged.

Appel announced also that he found evidence of altered ballots, cases where Republican marks had been erased and Democratic marks substituted.

As Appel concluded his first testimony, preliminary to his testimony today, Defendant Stevens, Democratic precinct captain, turned to this correspondent and remarked: "Well, that convicts us."

Stevens, who is a well-dressed personable young man employed by the city as a steam engineer, indicated he was aware he was not charged with any specific act in so far as ballot manipulation was concerned but that he feared the jury might disregard the technical charge of conspiracy against him when confronted with overwhelming evidence of fraud at that precinct.

"Silence Gives Consent."

During the last vote fraud trial, which, like the previous one, ended in convictions, Judge Merrill F. Otis pointed out, in effect, that "silence gives consent" in discussing the responsibility of election officials and workers who fail to avert open fraud.

The Government laid the groundwork for the introduction of Appel, who figured in the Lindbergh kidnaping case and originated a Federal laboratory for the examination of documents, by using witnesses who identified finger prints and signatures of some of the defendants. It became obvious that an attempt may be made to link one or more specific defendants with mishandled ballots at this final stage of the prosecution.

Defense counsel, the same attorneys figuring in the previous case, interposed numerous objections, most of them overruled by elderly United States District Judge Albert L. Reeves, who will preside at two vote fraud trials after the conclusion of this one. But they took up time and until the final hour of the day's session little material additional information was developed.

The morning was occupied by a series of about 50 witnesses who testified they went to the basement of the church used as a polling place and voted for Landon. The "official" count, disputed by the Government, gave the Republican presidential nominee 22 votes. The Government's count shows 89.

Freight Car Hits Man in Cafe.

PEABODY, Mass., March 12.—Martin Ward, a janitor, was injured today when a freight car, after jumping the rails in the business district, crashed through a cafe window and came to rest with its front section at the restaurant bar.

Convicted of Murdering Husband

MRS. VORIS GETS 16 YEARS FOR KILLING HUSBAND

Convicted of Murder After Prosecutor Declares 'East St. Louis Pistol Divorces Must Stop.'

Mrs. Myrtle Voris, fourth wife of Virgil Voris, 40-year-old ironworker, whom she shot and killed, was found guilty of murder last night by a jury in City Judge Ralph Cook's court, which fixed her punishment at 16 years' imprisonment after the prosecution, in closing argument, had declared that "pistol divorces in East St. Louis must stop."

The jury, whose average age was less than that of the attractive 35-year-old defendant and which included one Negro, returned its verdict at 10:05 o'clock, a little more than five hours after it received the case.

Mrs. Voris, who displayed emotion for the first time during the four days of the trial when she wept yesterday as she identified clothing worn by her husband at the time she shot him last Jan. 30 at their home, 3545 Converse avenue, had regained her composure.

New Trial to Be Sought.

An enigmatic smile played about her lips as the verdict was read but she quickly resumed the inscrutable expression which marked her appearance through most of the trial, later murmuring to reporters something to the effect that she would "keep a stiff upper lip." She was returned to the Belleville jail today to await action on an application for a new trial which her counsel was allowed 20 days for filing.

The jury appeared impressed at the summation of evidence by Chief Assistant State's Attorney R. V. Gustin at the conclusion of testimony.

Mrs. Voris had said she fired three shots at her husband in self-defense when he, armed with a shotgun, pursued her to the basement of their home where she had hidden the revolver to prevent his use of it. This followed a habitual Saturday holiday of drinking by Voris, she told the jury, and was immediately preceded by a quarrel resulting when she took him home from the house of Mrs. Catherine Voris, his third wife, whose divorce 14 months before had been followed by their marriage on the same day. She testified she was beaten frequently and offered other witnesses in corroboration.

The case had been sent to Judge Cook's court on a change of venue from Judge William F. Borders, who, in charging a grand jury which indicted Mrs. Voris, had ordered it to take notice of the "cycle of husband and wife murders in East St. Louis," partly attributing seven such killings in 14 months to the freeing of Mrs. Peggy Nash, who had killed her husband.

Prosecutor's Final Plea.

"We must put an end to pistol divorces in East St. Louis," Gustin emphasized in his address to the jury. "If you free her, you are serving notice that St. Clair County countenances them. The remedy for mistreatment of wives by husbands, or husband by wives, is to be found in divorce and not in murder.

"It is not a question of whether Virgil Voris was a vicious man," the prosecutor continued. "He was married to a hell cat and he had a right to slap her once in a while."

Gustin charged that the physical circumstances surrounding the murder indicated that Mrs. Voris had murdered her husband and placed the shotgun beside his body to deceive police and support her story of self-defense. An exhaustive review of evidence supporting this contention also was made by Assistant State's Attorney Wendell Phillips.

Former State's Attorney Hilmar C. Lindauer and his brother, Curt Lindauer, attorneys for Mrs. Voris, made much of the comparative size of the 225-pound ironworker and his 90-pound wife, scoffing at the testimony of Voris' parents and other relatives who said he had lived in fear of her virtually since their marriage 14 months before. They contended the evidence supported a perfect case of self-defense.

The minimum sentence for murder in Illinois is 14 years, or two years less than the sentence received by Mrs. Voris. She would be eligible for parole in nine years and three months.

Man Kills Son and Himself.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 12.—Two persons died from bullet wounds today and a third was in a hospital as the result of a family quarrel. Police said Vinzenco Angelo, 56 years old, shot and killed his son, Sam, 30, wounded another son, Roy, 20, and then killed himself.

DRIVER PAROLED, FINED $500, IN BOY'S DEATH

Earl C. Kram Pleads Guilty of Manslaughter in Case of Thomas H. Brown, 13.

Earl C. Kram, 27-year-old credit man, was paroled from the bench yesterday by Circuit Judge Frank C. O'Malley after being sentenced to a year in the Workhouse on his plea of guilty of manslaughter in the automobile death of a 13-year-old boy, but was forced to pay a $500 fine imposed by the Court.

A car driven by Kram struck and fatally injured Thomas Henry Brown, son of Joseph F. Brown, 5054 Raymond avenue, at Union and Lindell boulevards the night of Feb. 1, 1936. Assistant Circuit Attorney Clyde H. Snider recommended the Workhouse sentence and fine, but Thomas E. Mulvihill, parole officer for the Circuit Court, recommended a bench parole and staying of the fine. While a case of culpable negligence probably could have been made against Kram, Mulvihill told the Court, he had never been arrested before in a traffic case and his previous good record made a parole advisable.

Stay of Fine Opposed.

Judge O'Malley refused to accept Mulvihill's recommendation for staying of the fine, and the defendant paid it. The Judge told a Post-Dispatch reporter that Mrs. Anna Brown, mother of the dead boy, had urged him not to punish Kram, declaring it would accomplish no good. However, the Judge said, he opposed letting the defendant off without any punishment at all.

Testimony at the Coroner's inquest, which resulted in a verdict of criminal carelessness, was that Kram, a resident of Chesterfield, St. Louis County, surrendered at the Page Boulevard Police Station two and a half hours after the accident. In a statement to police he said he stopped after the accident, and on learning from others that the boy was being taken to a hospital, decided to drive a friend who was with him home before reporting to police.

Drinks After Sales Meeting.

Kram told police he had had two highballs after a sales meeting at Hotel Chase which he and the friend, Thompson H. Burckhardt, 8909 Burton avenue, Overland, had left a short time before the accident. Burckardt testified that he himself had five or six highballs after the meeting and fell asleep immediately after getting into the car, but that he did not know how many drinks Kram had. A City Hospital physician who examined Kram after he surrendered reported he had been drinking but was not intoxicated.

A boy, who was on his way with the Brown boy to coast in Forest Park at the time of the accident, testified that the automatic signal at the intersection changed as they reached the middle of Lindell boulevard, and he jumped back just in time to avoid being hit. Another witness, an acquaintance of Kram, testified that Kram's car passed him at 35 or 40 miles an hour a short distance east of Union boulevard, and the signal changed to green just as Kram's car reached the intersection.

Overproduction of Limburger.

MONTICELLO, Wis., March 12.—Producers of limburger cheese decided yesterday on a 45-day holiday to let consumers eat the surplus on hand. About 100 delegates from 40 factories in Green County approved a plan to produce no limburger from March 15 to May 1. Green County produces 75 per cent of the domestic output.

ST. LOUIS SCHOOL FUND BILL PASSED IN MISSOURI HOUSE

Would Let Board Deposit Money Without Requiring Payment of Interst.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 12.—A bill permitting the St. Louis Board of Education to deposit its funds without requiring the banks to pay interest was passed by the Seante today. It now goes to the House.

The measure was made necessary by provisions of the Federal Reserve Act and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Act prohibiting member banks from paying interest on public deposits after next August.

Interest drawn by the Board of Education bank account in the current fiscal year was expected to amount to only about $550. The annual contract for the deposit, made with the Security National Bank, Savings & Trust Co., for the year ending next June 30, called for only 1-100 of 1 per cent interest, a new low rate, compared with a maximum of 3.65 per cent on the general account in 1929-30. School officials have explained that requirements for security on the deposit, the condition of the money market and cost of handling the usiness prevented banks from making any material profit on the school account.

WAITER GETS $2200 VERDICT FOR BLOW BY HARRY K. THAW

Plaintiff Says He Was Struck Following Argument Over Bottle of Champagne.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Paul Jaeck, head waiter at a Washington hotel, won a $2200 verdict today for a black eye given him by Harry K. Thaw, who figured in the famous Stanford White murder case 30 years ago.

A Federal District Court jury found Jaeck was entitled to $200 damages for the pain and embarrassment of the blow and added $2000 punitive damages as a rebuke for Thaw's conduct. Jaeck asked for $10,000.

Jaeck claimed Thaw hit him with a cigarette in his fist Jan. 3, 1935, following an argument over a $5.70 bottle of champagne. Thaw, contending the champagne was flat, refused to pay that part of a $55 wine bill, Jaeck testified.

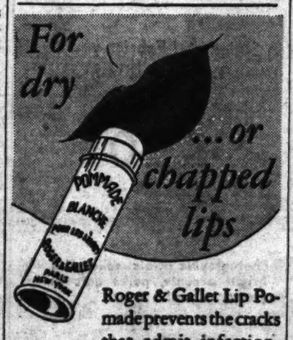

Thaw on the stand to defend himself, denied hitting Jaeck and said the blow, if delivered, was struck accidentally when he resisted efforts of hotel employes to eject him from the building. Jaeck claimed that after theargument about the champagne bill Thaw became infuriated when he ordered more wine and was served water. Thaw's attorney gave notice of intention to ask for a new trial.

WATCHMAN TRICKED, DISARMED AND ROBBED AT LUMBER YARD

Prowler Takes Pistol and Flashlight and Gets Away, Saying He Is "Government Man."

Clardy Mitchell, 60-year-old private watchman, was disarmed and robbed yesterday when tricked by a man he found hiding in lumber yards near Taylor and Hunt avenues. The man said he was a Government agent, and that Mitchell could get his revolver and flashlight if he called at the Arcade building. Mitchell failed to find a Federal office there later in the morning, decided he had been duped, and called police.

The watchman had drawn his weapon when he saw the man in shadows at the Wiles-Chipman Lumber Co. "I'm just looking for a place to sleep," the intruder said. Mitchell ordered him to the gate. "I can't unlock it," the man said, and when Mitchell leaned over to help, he drew a revolver, took the watchman's weapon and flashlight and said: "You fool. You've been monkeying with a Government man. You can get these back on the ninth floor of the Arcade building." He disappeared.

LIGHT VOTE BEING CAST IN MUNICIPAL PRIMARY

Fewer Than Half of Registrants Expected to Turn Out—Polls to Be Open Until 7 P. M.

A comparatively light vote was being cast today in the municipal primary to choose Democratic and Republican nominees for Mayor, Comptroller and the 14 Aldermen from the odd-numbered wards.

It was indicated in a canvass of precincts in all wards that about 65,000 votes had been cast up to 3 o'clock this afternoon, or 16 per cent of the registration of 411,787 voters. Indications were that considerably fewer than half of the voters would cast ballots, the total perhaps reaching 130,000.

Polling places of the 718 precincts, which opened at 6 o'clock this morning, will close at 7 o'clock this evening.

Names of Candidates.

Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann, seeking the Democratic nomination for a second four-year term, with the unanimous support of the Democratic City Committee, was opposed by C. George Saenger, bricklaying contractor.

Candidates for the Republican mayoral nomination were Oliver T. Remmers, lawyer and former head of the police and election boards and the Republican City Committee, who had the unanimous backing of that committee, and Henry P. Schroeder, a member of the Board of Education.

Seemingly the nominations will go to Mayor Dickmann and Remmers.

For Comptroller the Democratic candidates were Lawrence Boogher, banker, favored by Mayor Dickmann's forces, and State Representative Will L. Lindhorst. Louis Nolte, Comptroller for the last 20 years, was unopposed for the Republican nomination for a sixth term. He is the only Republican elective official left in the city government.

Nolte cast ballot No. 13 in the sixth precinct of the Second Ward. He said he considered this a good omen, as the number 13 has figured in his life in several ways.

Thirteen members of the solidly Democratic Board of Aldermen were seeking renomination, eight of them being supported by the Mayor and five opposed by him because of their past unfriendly attitude. Those not in the Mayor's favor were: John R. Slay, Seventh Ward; Samuel Brown, Ninth; Ellert F. Gummels, Eleventh; Joseph J. Hastey, Fifteenth, and John P. Collins, Nineteenth.

Deputy City Marshal William Clark was the administration candidate for a vacancy in the Twenty-first Ward, with an opponent who withdrew from the contest too late to have his name taken from the ballot. Four incumbent Aldermen were unopposed.

Twelve Republican aldermanic candidates were unopposed. There was an active contest between two Eleventh Ward aspirants, but one of two candidates named on the ballot from the Nineteenth Ward withdrew from the race.

Several thousand city employes were active in the Democratic organization, getting out the vote for the administration slate, city offices being closed.

Non-Partisans Want Backers to Stay Out of Primary.

The Executive Board of the Citizens' Non-Partisan Committee, meeting last night at German House, voted to advise members of the organization and supporters of its program not to vote in today's municipal primary.

Paul O. Peters, chairman and executive director of the Citizens' Committee, said this action was intended to avoid any question as to the qualifications of signers of the petitions, to be circulated next week, in support of the Committee's non-partisan ticket in the election of April 6.

As has been told, the committee intends to nominate by petitions candidates for Mayor, Comptroller and 14 members of the Board of Aldermen. The petitions will require about 6000 signatures, and the signers must state that they have not aided in the nomination of other candidates. This provision is held to bar as signers those who have participated in the primary.

BERLIN, March 12.—The crew of three of a German mail plane and Hans Herman, an officer of the Lufthansa (German National Airways) Line, riding as a passenger, were killed today in a crash in West Africa.

The plane, on a flight from Las Palmas, Canary Islands, to Bathurst, West Africa, fell into the Gambia River. The pilot was thought to have missed the landing place because of a dense fog.

NAVY OFFICER GOES ON TRIAL IN HONOLULU

Attended Drinking Party Before Alleged Attack on Wife of Submarine Chief.

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, March 12. — Lieut. W. O. Johnson of the cruiser Louisville went before a court-martial today on charges of drunkenness and conduct unbecoming an oficer.

Police Chief William Gabrielson of Honolulu said Lieut. Johnson was one of the Navy men who attended a drinking party the evening of Feb. 14. A few hours after the party, Mrs. Bennett S. Copping, wife of a submarine commander, reported she had been criminally assaulted in a garage near her apartment.

Grielson said Lieut. Johnson attended the party with the Coppings. Lieut. Copping left early for home. Later on, said Police Detective Thomas Quinn, Lieut. W. R. Allen, attached to the fleet airbase, and Dolores Debeck, a nurse, accompanied Mrs. Copping and Johnson from the party to the Copping's rooms.

Mrs. Copping told her husband she was attacked early Feb. 15 when she left her rooms to go to an outside washroom. Lieut. Copping, then commander of a submarine at Pearl Harbor, reported to police, and a futile search was made for a "tall white man."

A surgeon said an examination disclosed Mrs. Copping was not attacked.

INSURANCE DEAL INQUIRY DELAYED; COUNSEL HIRED

House Committee to Proceed Not Later Than March 22—Employs Former Judge J. M. Reeves.

SUB-COMMITTEE WILL BE DISSOLVED

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 12.—Another delay of probably a week in the opening of hearings in the proposed investigation of the Missouri fire insurance rate compromise, originally scheduled to begin Monday, was announced by the House Insurance Committee last night after it had employed former Circuit Judge James M. Reeves of Caruthersville as special counsel to aid the committee in the inquiry.

Chairman T. A. Shockley of Pulaski County said the committee decided to postpone the opening of hearings until not later than Monday, March 22, to enable Reeves to familiarize himself with available facts and the purposes of the inquiry. Shockley said this delay might be shortened.

Sub-Committee to Be Dissolved.

A sub-committee of three which had been appointed to recommend policies and the order in which different phases of the inquiry should be taken up, will be dissolved, Shockley said today, because Representative Francis Smith of St. Joseph, who initiated the original investigation move, declined to serve on the sub-committee. The other two members appointed to the sub-committee were E. J. Keating of Kansas City and C. P. Junge of Benton County.

Smith, in declining to serve, reiterated his former objections to the investigation being made by the House Insurance Committee instead of a special committee as originally proposed. As a result, he said, he would take no part in the formulation of any policies to be followed by the committee in the investigation. He is one of the 16 members of the committee.

The House resolution introduced by Smith last Feb. 17 called for creation of a special committee, with broad powers, to conduct a thorough investigation. It immediately encountered opposition which succeeded in amending the resolution to shunt the inquiry into the House Insurance Committee. To accomplish this political pressure was brought to bear on some of the Democratic members and pleas were made that the inquiry might harm the Democratic party.

Smith on Majority Attitude.

Smith has charged that a majority of the members of the House Insurance Commitete were not friendly to the investigation.

The investigation was authorized by the House Feb. 18. Since that time various causes have been assigned for the delays, including time spent in looking for an attorney.

The committee last Monday night announced the investigation would get under way on Monday, March 15, irrespective of whether the committee was successful by that time in obtaining special counsel.

Three Other Lawyers Declined Job.

Reeves was employed yesterday afternoon after a brief conference with members of the committee. He had been invited to come here to discuss the appointment after three attorneys previously agreed on by a majority of the committee had declined to accept the post. Those who declined were former State Senator Frank Hollingsworth of Mexico, Grover C. James of Joplin and former Circuit Judge Charles L. Henson of Springfield. Each gave the pressure of other legal duties or lack of time as a reason.

Reeves resigned last month as Judge of the Thirty-eighth Judicial Circuit, comprising Pemiscot and New Madrid Counties, after serving two years of a six-year term, to resume the private practice of law. He re-entered the firm of Ward & Reeves of Caruthersville, with which he was connected before his election as Circuit Judge in 1934. He has been an attorney for 16 years.

Reeves said he had no knowledge of the fire insurance rate litigation, in progress in Missouri since 1922, or the rate compromise, "except for a very casual reading of the newspapers."

"I have no ideas about it," he said, "except that, so far as I am concerned, it is the intention to give the matter as much investigation as time will permit. So far as I know, no one has anything to cover up."

The House recently authorized the committee to expend up to $1000 as a fee for special counsel.

Compromise Still in Court.

The compromise was entered into in May, 1935, between State Insurance Superintendent R. Emmet O'Malley and the fire insurance companies. It has been put into effect as to rate suits in the Federal Court, but was twice rejected in a rate case in the State courts and has been resubmitted for a third time in an effort to gain court approval, in connection with an appeal pending in the Missouri Supreme Court.

The compromise agreement was designed to end the rate litigation and divide up the nearly $13,000,000 of excess premiums paid by policyholders, which had been impounded in the State and Federal Courts in litigation over a 16 2-3 per cent increase in fire insurance rates forced into effect by the companies in June, 1930, under temporary Federal Court injunctions.

The compromise agreement provided for return to the policyholders of 20 per cent of the impounded funds. One-half was to go to the companies, from which agents' commissions were to be paid, and the other 30 per cent was to be turned over to two company representatives as trustees, from which would be paid attorney fees, including those of special counsel for the State, $200,000 to reimburse the Insurance Department for expenses incurred, payments of court costs and other expenses and items so far not publicly disclosed.

TAXES ON SMALL INCOMES USUALLY PAID IN LUMP SUM

But 42 Pct. of Those Earning More Than $5000 a Year Use Installment Plan.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Big income taxpayers use the installment payment plan more than do the little ones, it was disclosed today.

Under the law, taxes can be paid in four quarterly payments. About 73 per cent of the taxpayers with incomes under $5000 pay the full amount at once, compared with 58 per cent of those having incomes over that figure.

Officials said the payments in the lower bracket average only $25 to $30. Tax payments on incomes over $5000 average between $1200 and $1300, with some running into the hundreds of thousands.

Of 4,473,426 individual returns filed last year, only 2,067,736 were taxable.

STRIKERS GO ON SHIFTS IN FURNITURE COMPANY

70 Unmarried Men Hold Meier & Pohlmann Plants During Night.

The 225 sit-down strikers at the Meier & Pohlmann Furniture Co., 1400 Palm street, began to hold the two plants of the company in shifts last night. About 70 unmarried men stayed in the plants during the night, allowing the married men and the 11 young woman strikers to go home. This morning the married men returned, giving the bachelors a chance to go home.

Strict discipline was kept by the strike leaders, who yesterday signed up all the strikers for a C I O union, as yet undesignated. The night shift was awakened at 5:30 a. m., swept up the plant and had a breakfast prepared by the woman strikers at the home of one of them. The woman strikers then came to the plant and washed the dishes. Then card games began, and dancing to tunes by the strikers' four-piece orchestra of guitar, mandolin and two harmonicas, with the women serving as partners.

Arthur Meier, general plant manager, returned to the city yesterday, and the strikers expected to confer with him today. Joseph J. Gruender, president of the company, refused to deal with the strikers until Meier's return. Meier told the strikers yesterday that they could all go home during the night and be assured readmittance to the plant this morning, but they declined.

The workers, who began their strike Wednesday afternoon, are asking for 43 cents an hour minimum and a 40-hour week. They said they have been forced to work 65 to 84 hours a week, at wages averaging from $10 to $15 a week, with a few employes making as low as $5 and others as high as $22.

Track Work for Bridge Approved.

Permission to cross tracks of the Terminal, Wabash and Burlington railroads in construction of the $1,500,000 proposed bridge across the Mississippi River between St. Clair avenue, National City, and the 1500 block of North Broadway was granted to St. Clair County yesterday by the Missouri Public Service Commission, according to notice received by B. C. McCurdy, St. Clair County Superintendent of Highways.

WOMAN TELLS S E C OF ATLAS STOCK DEAL

Got 2000 Shares From Hutton Firm—Doesn't Know Whether She Put Up Any Money.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Miss Blanche M. McCarthy of Detroit told the Securities and Exchange Commission today she had obtained more than 2000 shares of Atlas Tack Corporation at one time, but did not know whether she had put up any money for it.

She said she had a brokerage account with W. E. Hutton & Co., in Detroit, and that all her deals in Atlas Tack were handled by her brother, Jerry McCarthy, a Hutton customers' man.

The commission alleged Miss McCarthy was one of a group of five persons who purchased 37,000 shares of the stock through an agent at $9.75 and resold it immediately to the Hutton company for $11. The company has been charged by the commission with manipulating the stock.

Miss McCarthy said her first direct transaction in the stock was on Nov. 15, 1935, when she received 620 shares. Simultaneously, she said, she received a check of $740 for her participation in the large group purchase.

She said her brother subsequently purchased 2031 shares of the stock jointly for herself and her sister, Ann, at $11 a share, from W. E. Hutton & Co. Of this amount, she said, 2000 shares were pledged with a Detroit bank for a loan with which to make payments.

"You didn't put up a single nickel in acquiring all this stock, did you?" Commission Counsel Jacob Gruber asked.

Miss McCarthy said she didn't know.

She testified that from Jan. 13 to Feb. 5, 1936, she disposed of 700 shares of the stock at prices ranging from $23 to $26.

Under questioning by her attorney, Frederick McGraw of Detroit, Miss McCarthy testified she now owns 2500 shares of Atlas stock, including 1400 shares purchased early last year at prices ranging from $24 to $27.

F H A TO STOP GUARANTEEING HOME REPAIR LOANS MARCH 31

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Congressional leaders and housing officials disclosed today the Federal Housing Administration would cease guaranteeing home modernization and repair loans after March 31.

That is the expiration date of the section of the Federal Housing Act containing authority for guaranteeing modernization loans. Several Congressmen have proposed an extension, but Chairman Steagall (Dem.), Alabama, of the House Banking and Currency Committee said he saw no indications his committee would approve.

The Housing Administration still must supervise collection of about 1,380,000 insured loans representing $525,000,000. Administrator Stewart McDonald estimates that task will take four years with an annual administrative outlay of $500,000.

CHRYSLER STRIKE CONFEREES QUIT UNTIL MONDAY

Union Announces It Will Comply With Gov. Murphy's Request to Meet Him Tonight.

5000 MEN REMAIN IN DETROIT PLANTS

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., March 12.—The conferences of representatives of the United Automobile Workekrs of America and the Chrysler Corporation were adjourned late today until Monday, and the union announced it would comply with a request by Gov. Frank Murphy that union representatives meet with him tonight in a Detroit hotel.

Detrot plants of thet corporation have been closed since Monday by sit-down strikes, the shut-down affecting 55,000 workers. Court action on the company's petition for an injunction against the strikers and union leaders is set for tomorrow.

Governor's Statement.

Gov. Murphy said at Lansing this afternoon that he would call a meeting in Detroit of representatives of the public "who labor" and employers, and ask all parties to co-operate in preserving law and order.

"The present situation," he said, 'must be regarded as unforunate by all sides to this controversy and by every one else. Every patriotic person must see the necessity of preserving law and order and of avoiding suspension of the institutions of democratic government."

Denied access to their offices in the plant by the strikers, Chrysler executives set up headquarters in a downtown building.

It is estimated that 5000 strikers are occuping the company's plants.

Officers of the Chrysler plant at Los Angeles, employing 1100 men, announced that it would be closed indefinitely because of a shortage of materials. The New Castle (Ind.) unit had closed earlier for the same reason.

Homer Martin, president of the union, joined in the Chrysler conference yesterday and said the company turned down the union's offer to prove in an election that it represents a majority of the employes.

"Here is another astonishing example of the unyielding dictatorship of industry," said Martin. He added that corporation officers "can come into no court with clean hands as long as they refuse to obey the law by which they now seek an injunction."

"All we are interested in now," remarked B. E. Hutchinson, Chrysler finance chairman, "is the law on legal possession of other people's property."

Lester L. Colbert, Chrysler attorney, said the union had submitted plans purporting to be agreements where other companies accorded it sole bargaining rights. He said none of the proposals was acceptable to the corporation.

"We want it clearly understood," the attorney asserted, "that when a final agreement is reached we are not willing to grant sole rights."

Richard T. Frankensteen, organinational director of the U A W A, and a former Chrysler employe, said concerning the strike: "We have to stay out eight or nine weeks every summer. We might as well do it now and go back under better conditions. Formerly we went back under the same conditions."

Other Strikes Continue.

There were no signs of a resumption of conversations between the union and the Hudson Motor Car Co., whose plants also are held by sit-down strikers, leaving 10,000 workers idle. The management rejected the request of the U A W A for sole collective bargaining rights.

Strikers still possessed the Reo Motor Car Co.'s plant at Lansing. Three-fourths of the 2200 idle employes were estimated to be remaining inside. There, too, the company rejected the U A W A's request for exclusive bargaining rights. Engineers designing new models were permitted to continue their work.

Rephrasing of certain portions of an accord between General Motors Corporation and the automobile workers apparently was the chief task to be completed today before representatives of each sign it.

The formal affixing of signatures was delayed a day when the union said General Motors had made some changes in the final draft and insisted that "original phraseology" be restored. There also were counter-charges of violations of the Feb. 11 truce.

Both sides indicated the delay did not signify a serious hitch in the negotiations, which opened Feb. 16, to compose differences left unsettled in the truce that terminated the widespread strikes in the corporation's plants.

More than 200 delegates from union locals in various plants are to assemble here tomorrow to ratify the General Motors-union compact.

A one-year contract with a U A W A at Muskegon, Mich., affecting only union members, was announced by W. R. Angell, president of Continental Motors Corporation, which employs 1400 workers. The agreement provides for wage increases averaging 5 cents hourly, seniority rights, arbitration of disputes, and a 44-hour week with time and one-half for overtime.

SIX ARRESTED IN THEFTS FROM 50 PRIVATE GARAGES

About $1000 Worth of Stolen Property Already Recovered, Police Report.

Six men, among them a former convict and two junk dealers, are under arrest suspected in the theft of automobile parts and property left in automobiles from 50 private garages in the last three months. Detective-Sergeant Joseph Mathews said none of the suspects admitted participation in the thefts.

One of the junk dealers and a companion were arrested last night in a private garage in the 3000 block on Sheridan avenue, where a stolen automobile, a motion picture projecting machine and an expensive camera were found. The other junk dealer was arrested at his yard, where other property stolen from automobiles in private garages was recovered.

Mathews said property already recovered included 10 shotguns, four revolvers, tires, wheels, batteries and other car parts, altogether valued at $1000. Most of the thefts occurred in the northwest and south sections of the city.

REMINGTON-RAND PRESIDENT TO SEE SECRETARY PERKINS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Secretary of Labor Perkins received word today that James H. Rand Jr., president of Remington-Rand, Inc., would confer with her here Thursday on renewal of negotiations with the Office Equipment Workers' Council, whose Remington-Rand workers went on strike last May.

The company says its plants are operating at 100 per cent capacity under collective bargaining agreements which provide for arbitration of any disputes over wages and hours, but the union insists the strike started last May still is in effect.

UNITED MINERS SEEK SOLE BARGAINING RIGHT IN ILLINOIS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 12. — The United Mine Workers scale committee demanded recognition as the sole bargaining agency for all the state's miners at a conference with representatives of the Illinois Coal Operators' Association yesterday.

Since 1932, when a split in the U M W A ranks resulted in the formation of the Progressive Miners of America, the two groups have disputed intermittently over authority in the Illinois coal areas. Twelve men were killed in Christian County alone, and 23 coal trains were bombed.

The U M W A committee claiming to represent an "overwhelming" majority of miners, also asked for wage increases, a six-hour day and a five-day week.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 12.—The Coal Producers Association of Illinois announced last night that after nine days of negotiations it had been unable to reach an agreement with the Progressive Miners of America on wages and working conditions. The conference will be resumed the week of March 22.

DETROIT DEPARTMENT STORE SIT-DOWN IN THIRD DAY

3000 Employes Directed to Get Pay Checks at Bank; Negotiations Continue.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, March 12.—The sit-down at Crowley-Milner & Co., large department store which was closed along with 12 other Detroit firms because of sit-down strikes, was in its third day today.

While union and company officers planned a new conference the store in a newspaper advertisement directed its 3000 employes to call for this week's pay checks today at a bank.

James B. Jones, company president, who interrupted a stay in Florida to attend negotiations, arrived last night. Demands of the strikers have not been made public.

STRIKERS TO NAME STRATEGY BOARD AT FIRESTONE PLANT

Walkout at Akron, O., Puts 10,000 Tire Workers Out of Employment.

By the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., March 12.—The United Rubber Workers' Union will name a board of strategy for the strike it called at the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. yesterday, it was announced today.

L. S. Buckmaster, president of the Firestone local, said three members of the local, three from the Rubber Workers' International and Alan Haywood, Committee for Industrial Organization adviser, would comprise the group.

Buckmaster said the company had agreed to recognize the union, but for its members only and not for the entire plant, as demanded. The company agreed to discontinue financing its employe conference plan, he said, but refused to abolish it. The company issued no statement.

GARMENT WORKERS WIN CLOSED SHOP AT MEMPHIS

Agreement Ends Strike in Dress Factory; Barrel Company Grants Increase.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 12. — Strikes affecting 550 workers in two industries were settled here yesterday. The Tri-State Dress Manufacturing Co. signed an agreement with members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union granting a closed shop, 40-hour week and a $12 minimum wage for girls of average ability. The Chickasaw Wood Products Co., manufacturers of barrels, granted more than 400 unorganized employes a five-cent an hour increase three hours after the workers walked out for a 10-cent increase.

RAILROAD TRACK WORKERS' UNION JOINS A. F. OF L.

Brotherhood to Take Over Contracts of Pennsylvania Line Group and Demand Wage Increase.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, March 12.—More than 200 delegates of the Maintenance of Way Employes Union voted yesterday to merge their organization with the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

The delegates said they represented more than 23,000 workers, most of them employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad and subsidiary lines.

Elmer C. Milliman, secretary-treasurer of the Federation's unit, said the Brotherhood would take over the representation rights and agreements with the Pennsylvania and other lines.

The Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes, one of 17 railroad brotherhoods affiliated with the Federation of Labor, has 100,000 members and has contracts with railroads having 93 per cent of the mileage in the United States, Milliman said.

In Chicago a few weeks ago the Brotherhood asked for a flat increase of 20 cents an hour for all maintenance of way workers.

Milliman said a similar demand would be made on the Pennsylvania Railway, whose employes have had an independent union since 1922.

Leaders of the employe representation plan (company union) in the Carnegie-Illinois steel mills discussed yesterday a proposal to discard company aid and form a self-supporting organization.

F. W. Bohne of Youngstown, chairman of a committee which is to submit a revised plan to the 18 mills in the Pittsburgh-Youngstown district, said he expected an agreement on all points today.

Republic Steel Corporation announced in Cleveland wage increases and a more liberal vacation plan for employes of its subsidiaries.

Details agreed upon by the management and company union men of subsidiaries follow the agreements reached for 35,000 employes of Republic's Northern plants.

All hourly, tonnage, day and piece rate workers will receive an increase of 10 cents an hour, effective March 16. Time and a half will be paid for overtime in excess of eight hours in any one day and 40 hours per week.

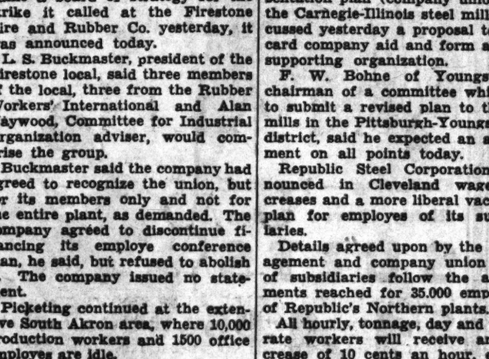

The vacation plan provides for a three-day vacation for employes with three years' service and a graduated scale up to 10 days for employes of 15 years' service.

Held Justified in Killing Father.

By the Associated Press.

CHICO, Cal., March 12. — A Coroner's jury decided yesterday the killing of J. A. Shields, 45 years old, by his son, Sherman, 14, was "justifiable homicide" but District Attorney Joe R. King said he would file charges against the boy. Mrs. Blanche Parsons, County Probation Officer, refused to permit Sherman to testify at the inquest. His mother and an officer, who said that the elder Shields attacked his 15-year-old daughter, testified.

ART MUSEUM OBTAINS NEAR EAST POTTERY

Two Are Purchases, Third Is Gift From Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Davis.

Purchase of two fine examples of ancient Near East pottery, and acquisition of another through the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Davis, 13 Westmoreland place, was announced today by City Art Museum in Forest Park. Davis is a member of the museum's board of control.

The Davis gift is a faience bottle, said to represent the finest work of the Persian potters of Rhages during the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. It was included in the International Exhibition of Persian Art in London in 1931. The bottle, with a fine paste body, is decorated with figure medallions in brilliant enamel and gilded arabesques in relief.

The larger of the two purchased examples, a plate decorated in the center with a royal peacock in blue, green and aubergine on a white background, is of a type generally associated with Samarra, a city on the Tigris in Northwestern Mesopotamia which was the residence of the Abbasid caliphs during most of the ninth century.

The other piece purchased, a small bowl, is of a rare type which has been excavated at the site of the ancient city of Resafa, near Rakka, which was one of the main centers of ceramic production in Syria. Inside the bowl is a freely drawn design of a running antelope under a mimosa tree. The decoration is executed in blue, red and black, under a heavy transparent glaze.

All three examples are from the Parish-Watson Co., collection exhibited at the museum last year. The new acquisitions are in Gallery 26, with the Rhages bowl which was presented to the museum by Joseph Werner a few weeks ago. The museum paid $5200 for the Samarra plate and $2500 for the Ressafa bowl.

PROPOSES TO CONSOLIDATE D. & R.G. AND WESTERN PACIFIC

Chairman of Two Roads Sees Jesse Jones, Says He Will Get to Work at Once.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Following a conference yesterday with Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, T. M. Schumacher, chairman of the Denver & Rio Grande Western and Western Pacific railroads, said he would "start to work immediately" on a proposal to consolidate the two properties.

Schumacher, who declared the primary purpose of his visit to Jones was to renew an old acquaintanceship, said he found the R F C head "all for" the projected merger.

Schumacher said he understood security holders of the two roads already had commenced negotiations looking to an agreement on the method of consolidation.

Kansas 3.2 Beer Bill Passed.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., March 12. — In little more than a half hour yesterday the Senate passed the Plummer-Schrepel bill, amended to legalize the sale of beverages of 3.2 per cent alcoholic content, and sent it back to the House.

Senator Cox Up at Sunup To Watch the State's Autos

He Argues for His Bill to Sell Most of Machines, but Committee Is More Amused Than Impressed.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 12. — Senator Raymond E. Cox of Audrain County, author of a proposal for the State to sell nearly all the passenger automobiles which it owns and never buy any more, explained to the Senate Elections Committee yesterday how he had spent the last two months gathering evidence to support his measure.

Except for a minor bill affecting no district other than his own, this is the only legislation which Cox has introduced. All his efforts are bent to its passage, but his earnestness seemed only to amuse the members of the committee, none of whom shares the enthusiasm of the Senator from Audrain for taking some 500 automobiles away from the State jobholders.

Cox directed his argument toward proving that the practice of the State owning passenger cars is an extravagance, inviting abuse by State employes who have access to the machines. Legislative approval of his proposal would submit to the voters a constitutional amendment barring such cars except for use by the Governor and members of the Highway Patrol.

Watched State Cars.

In describing the results of his long personal inquiry, he disclosed that he had kept notebooks to record his observation of the movement of State cars, inspected the State garage on holidays to see how many machines were missing, studied the purchasing agent's files and sent out questionnaires to citizens.

"Driving along the highway I pass many State cars," he said, "and when three or four women in fur coats go by in one, I know they're not out on State business. Cars full of bird dogs and shotguns aren't on official business either, but I've seen a lot of them.

"One morning I was out at the penitentiary about sunup and I saw an automobile that I had looked at a couple of days before. For some reason or other, the speedometer had been turned back several thousand miles. Those cars are supposed to be used only around Jefferson City, but some of them have traveled 70,000 or 80,000 miles," Cox continued.

Asked what he was doing around the penitentiary at "sunup," the Senator replied that his self-appointed investigation was so arduous as to require him to work night and day.

Investigated on Sundays Too.

He related that on a particularly pleasant Sunday he visited the basement of the Capitol building, where many of the State pleasure cars are kept.

"There was not one car in the place," he said.

When he sought information on the purchase of 95 cars, complete details of the transactions were available in but 27 cases, Cox told the committee. He complained also that "too many of the cars are being wrecked at the expense of the State."

"Of course, it's just human nature for a man who doesn't have a car of his own to use a State car for the pleasure of himself and his family if he has access to it," he continued. "If my bill is adopted, officials will use their own machines for State business and will be paid for the exact cost of operation."

Observers in Jefferson City have found nothing incredible in Cox's statement. A regular early morning sight here is the State jobholder and his wife emerging from a store with armloads of parcels, getting into an automobile with an "Official Car" tag and driving away, the family marketing done.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN AUTO, TRUCK COLLIDE

Mrs. Frank Gushard, 65, Riding With Husband in Car in East St. Louis.

Mrs. Frank Gushard, 65 years old, 1218 North Fiftieth street, East St. Louis, was killed last night when an automobile in which she was riding with her husband was struck at Eleventh street and Lynch avenue, East St. Louis, by a truck driven by William Johnson, a Negro, 2102 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis.

She died of a fractured skull at St. Mary's Hospital at 8:30 o'clock, about an hour after the collision. Her husband, who was cut and bruised, said Johnson was driving at a high rate of speed and ignored a stop sign. The Negro, who was not hurt, denied this. He was held for the Coroner. Another Negro who was riding with him, Ralph Williams, was cut and bruised.

Policeman Hurt When His Auto Goes Through Barricade.

Patrolman Fred J. Reidel drove his automobile through a barricade into an excavation for the grade separation at DeBaliviere avenue and the Wabash tracks at 5:30 a. m. today while on his way to report for election duty.

The machine dropped about 20 feet, police reported, and Reidel suffered cuts of the face and knees for which he was treated at City Hospital. Reidel entered DeBaliviere avenue through a lane in a barricade at Lindell boulevard. The police emergency truck and crew was called to remove Reidel's automobile from the excavation.

Four persons were hurt when the automobile in which they were riding struck a traffic light standard at Chouteau avenue and the Jefferson avenue viaduct at 12:25 a. m. today. Lawrence Spriggs, a clerk, 2616 North Garrison avenue, the driver, suffered lacerations. His wife, Thelma, and brother, Charles Spriggs, are in City Hospital with skull injuries. Mrs. Nora Lammert 2317 Park avenue, was cut and bruised. Spriggs said the traffic signal changed as he neared the intersection and the machine swerved against the standard when he applied the brakes. He was booked for careless driving and destruction of property.

Henry Suren, 68, 3509 Itaska street, suffered fractures of the leg and hip and internal injuries when struck by an automobile in front of his home at 9:15 o'clock last night. The driver, Albert Wamser Jr., 4754 Alaska avenue, told police Suren apparently became confused while crossing the street and stepped out of the way of another automobile into the path of his machine. Suren was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital.

CENTRAL TRADES UNION HOPES TO AVOID FIGHT OVER C I O

Question of Ousting Four Will Be Kept Off Floor if Possible, Secretary Says.

The question of ousting four local unions identified with the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization from the Central Trades and Labor Union, which is affiliated with the A. F. of L., will be avoided at a meeting of the Central Trades Sunday afternoon, if possible, William M. Brandt, secretary of the central body, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter today.

Asked to comment on a published statement by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that unions must make a distinction between the A. F. of L. and the C I O, Brandt said no definite intsructions on the subject had been received locally from A. F. of L. headquarters. In the absence of orders Brandt hopes to keep the question off the floor at Sunday's meeting.

"We trust there will be no disruption in the central body," the secretary said. An earlier attempt by leaders of certain local craft unions to organize a fight on the C I O was discouraged by other craft union leaders, who stressed the past harmony between the two groups here.

The four C I O unions, having a total membership of about 3000 workers, affiliated with the Central Trades, are: Amalgamated Clothing Workers, International Ladies' Garment Workers, Gas and Coke By-Product Workers and the United Automobile Workers of America. The Central Trades is an organization of 182 local unions representing about 70,000 workers.

INSPECTION TO DECIDE FATE OF PEARY'S POLAR SHIP

Vessel Used in Two Expeditions to Be Examined in Panama as to Seaworthiness.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—Commodore Robert E. Peary's Polar exploration ship, the Roosevelt, now a tug, lies off Cristobal, C. Z., awaiting drydock inspection that may determine its fate.

Oozing tar in the heat, scarred from an 80-mile gale in the Caribbean, the Roosevelt still is structurally sound enough to continue in service, its owners say.

Earlier reports said the craft had been abandoned and beached after the crew gave up efforts to tow the old navy collier Jason from Seattle to New York.

The Roosevelt, built in 1905 at Bucksport, Me., twice forced a way through the Polar pack to 82 degrees north. It was frozen in at Cape Sheridan, the farthest north a ship has been frozen in the ice pack. Peary made his dash to the Pole from Cape Sheridan in 1908.

A STATEMENT of POLICY

by The President of Bond Clothes

You have no doubt read in the newspapers, or heard on the radio, reports from competent authority, that the prices of men's clothing would be increased this Spring, by 10% to 15%. We believe that our many thousands of "partners"—Bond customers of today and tomorrow—will want to know how this will affect them.

Ever since 1908, when we opened our first store, one dominating principle has been behind our every move—to sell you the best clothes we could make, at a fair price. How well we have succeeded, is best evidenced by the fact that Bond is now the largest retailer of men's clothing in the United States.

Today, we have 2900 master-tailors on our payroll—and over a million men on our list of customers. Were it not for this large "family" of Bond workers and Bond customers, this statement of policy could never have been written.

Woolens have already gone up in price—and continue to move higher at an unusually fast clip. There is a very definite shortage of raw wool. But Bond customers need have no concern that these conditions will affect their pocketbooks, this Spring. Our vast production permitted us to contract for Spring fabrics months before this rise started. We saved money. And this Spring, you will share in these savings!

What's more, the tailors in our factories are kept busy 52 weeks a year—without a layoff! And you know that contented, well-paid employees turn out more work—and better work—at a substantially lower cost. Here again, Bond customers draw down a healthy bonus!

Therefore, in spite of changing conditions for Spring, there will be NO INCREASE IN BOND PRICES.

There will be no decrease in Bond quality.

There will be no let-down in Bond Service.

You will continue to get the finest woolens our money can buy. You will continue to get Rochester-tailored quality at its best—the product of our own Rochester plant. You will continue to get two trousers with every suit. You will continue to get expert service of fitters trained in our own factories. You will continue to get the convenience of a Bond Charge Account, with its simple method of payment—weekly or twice a month.

You will continue to enjoy all of these well-established advantages of buying at Bond's—and you need not pay one cent more than you did last year, or the year before.

These are the facts—our policy for this Spring! You will agree that they are important to every man who plans to buy new clothes.

DRIVERS' LICENSE BILL SLUMBERS IN COMMITTEE

Indications Are That Measure Will Remain in Senate Roads Group When Legislature Adjourns.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 12.—Whatever effect the increasing number of automobile accidents and the toll of dead and injured may have had on the public mind, there is no indication they have penetrated the consciousness of the Missouri Legislature to an extent that will cause the enactment of a Statewide drivers' license law this year.

While the bill has made some slight progress in the House, being on the calendar for perfection, the companion bill in the Senate is resting securely in the Committee on Roads and Highways, with all signs pointing to it dying there at the end of the legislative session, some two months hence.

If by any chance the House bill should be passed or the Senate committee permit it or the Senate bill to reach the floor of the Senate, it would be so emasculated that its successful working would be seriously in doubt.

City Administration Opposition.

Three reasons are assigned at the Capitol for the lack of constructive interest among legislative leaders in carrying into effect the principal measure advocated by highway safety groups to reduce the automobile death rate. They are (1) the failure of the Stark administration to make the bill a "must" issue; (2) the subtle but none the less influential opposition of the city administrations of St. Louis and Kansas City, which have drivers' license laws and whose officials object to surrendering to the State the revenue the cities derive from them; (3) the supposed rural objection to regulatory supervision, requiring examination of drivers, and to even a small license fee.

The two bills introduced were substantially the same, the Senate bill being the standard act drawn by the United States Bureau of Public Roads; and the House bill, presented by Representative Barton of Montgomery County, being modeled along the same lines. The only substantial difference was that the Senate bill fixed a $1 fee for a three-year license, while the Barton bill required no fee.

Auto Club in Background.

Though Gov. Stark in his inaugural message included a recommendation for a drivers' license law, he has refused to commit himself to any particular bill and has not taken a position of leadership for such legislation. The Governor's legislative activity has been largely directed toward increasing the sales tax from 1 to 2 per cent and to increasing the State gasoline tax from 2 to 3 cents.

In the absence of executive pressure, the proposed drivers' license legislation has languished.

The principal influence behind the Senate bill was the Automobile Club of Missouri, which has conducted an active campaign along highway safety lines for many years. However, it remained in the background after causing the introduction of the bill and after failing to obtain active support from the Governor for it. Its representatives were told by high administration officials that bills sponsored by organizations always aroused demagogic but telling opposition, and that it would be well if the Automobile Club were "not too active."

Accepting this advice, the club's position has been that it presented the bill and the responsibility for its passage or defeat rested on the Legislature. Also, much of the time of the club's representatives at the Capitol has been occupied in opposing the Governor's 3-cent gasoline tax bill.

Allotment of Fees to Cities.

When the Barton bill was called up for perfection in the House, Representative Hess of St. Louis offered several amendments, and further consideration was postponed pending the printing of the amendments for the information of members.

Chief among these was one fixing the license fee at $1 for three years, making the city officials now administering municipal drivers' license laws deputy State commissioners, and allotting to the cities 75 cents of the fee.

The effect of this would be to give St. Louis, Kansas City and other cities having their own municipal acts 75 per cent of the fees, while counties throughout the State and cities which have not adopted local laws would not have this money. In some places the State Commissioner would have no voice in choosing his representatives, while in others he would.

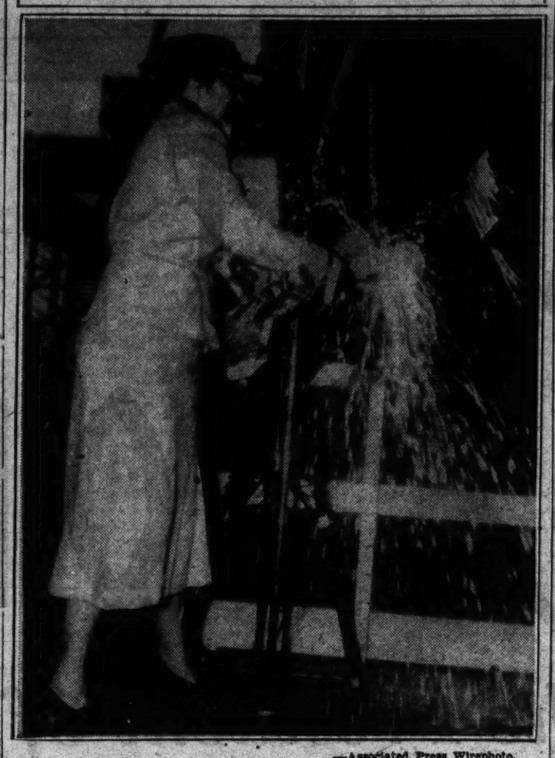

It is apparent that the success of the opposition to a State-wide bill in the Legislature two years ago is complicating the efforts to pass such a bill now. Then the opposition, principally rural, though led by Senator Casey of Kansas City, forced the advocates to accept merely an enabling act, under which cities were authorized to pass local ordinances for drivers' licenses. Many cities, including St. Louis, took advantage of the enabling act and now they do not want to surrender to a State authority.

Several Perfunctory Hearings.

The Senate bill has been in the Roads and Highways Committee since Feb. 4, and several perfunctory hearings have been held on it, but it has been laid over from time to time, and to all appearances will continue to be laid over.

A common expression about legislative halls in referring to a bill which a committee intends to kill is that at each committee meeting "it is taken out, dusted off and laid back to sleep." That is what is happening to the Senate drivers' license bill.

LOAN FRAUD CHARGED IN SUIT FOR $58,000

L. M. Brohammer, Former Officer, Acts Against Head of Concern and Bank.

Louis M. Brohammer, former vice-president of the St. Louis Bank Building & Equipment Co., 906 Sidney street, filed suit in the Circuit Court today against Joseph B. Gander, president of the company, the Chippewa Trust Co., 3803 South Broadway, and two other defendants, for $58,000 damages, alleging he was defrauded of 16,200 shares of stock of the company.

Others named defendants in the suit are Edwin S. Munsch, president of the Chippewa Trust Co., and Walter D. Hedenkamp, who is connected with the equipment company.

The petition alleges that, beginning in 1930, Brohammer gave the bank a series of promissory notes for loans, depositing certain stocks as collateral. He made payments to the trust company on certain loans, and some of his collateral was sold to satisfy other notes.

Among the securities he posted, he alleges, was 16,200 shares of the equipment company, valued at $85,000 as of last July. When a foreclosure was ordered on his loan transactions, he charges, Munsch told him to stay away from the public sale, and he, through an agent, would buy the stock at a low cost, and deliver it to Brohammer for settlement of his transactions with the bank. Brohammer was to pay $16,200 to the bank in cash.

Brohammer alleges he agreed to the arrangement, and the bank did acquire the stock, but, instead of delivering it to him, transferred it to Hedenkamp, and later to others. His suit asks for $48,000 actual and $10,000 punitive damages.

Munsch said he had no comment and Gander could not be reached.

COMMITTEE TO URGE CITY ACTION UNDER HOUSING PLAN

Formation of a committee to urge that St. Louis take advantage of any appropriations made available if the Wagner housing bill, now before Congress, is enacted, was announced today by Mrs. George C. Smith, vice-president of the League of Women Voters and chairman of its Slum Clearance Committee.

The bill provides for creation of a Federal Housing Authority and an appropriation of $1,000,000,000 for housing projects in states which enact legislation required for participation in the program. Such legislation is pending in the Missouri Legislature.

Those organizing the committee, which will have 100 members, are: Mrs. Roscoe Anderson, Irving Brant, the Rev. John J. Butler, John T. Clark, Frank E. Lawrence Jr., Bishop William Scarlett, Luther Ely Smith, Mrs. W. Victor Weir, Rabbi Julius Gordon, Thomas F. Quinn, Harland Bartholomew and Mrs. Smith.

FRANKLIN R. PIERCE BEQUESTS INCLUDE $5000 TO HIS DOCTOR

The will of Franklin R. Pierce, 5545 Bartmer avenue, president of the Louis Werner Saw Mill Co., who died a week ago, was filed in Probate Court yesterday. Various specific bequests were provided for by him, including $5000 each to his physician, Dr. Warren P. Elmer, Crombie S. Chesbro, Mrs. George W. Swartz of Harrisburg, Pa., and Mrs. Halfred Warden of Rochester, N. Y. Additional bequests include amounts left to relatives.

Other bequests are 1000 sahres of the Dr. Pepper company stock and 220 shares of Gulf Oil Co. to Mrs. Marie Ittner and $1500 each to two employes.

The residue of the estate, the value of which was not estimated, is to be distributed among a group of relatives. The will requests that Andrew Roy Thompson, a nephew of Des Moines, Ia., succeed Mr. Pierce as president of the saw mill company. The St. Louis Union Trust Co. and Thompson were named as co-executors and trustees.

CHILDREN'S SOCIETY INDORSES MISSOURI ADOPTION BILL

Proposal Would Insure Social Investigation and Provide for Trial Period.

An adoption bill, setting up new safeguards to protect the interests of children, which has been introduced in the State Legislature, was indorsed at a recent meeting of the St. Louis Children's Aid Society.

Provisions of the proposal would insure social investigation before adoption is arranged; protect the adopting parents by thorough examination of children and their natural parentage, and provide for a trial period before a final adoption decree is issued. All adoption records would be held confidential.

The groups sponsoring the bill are the Missouri Association for Social Welfare, the Parent-Teachers' Association, the Women's Legislature Committee and the League of Women Voters.

M'MENAMY RECEIVERSHIP HEARING SET FOR MARCH 25

Seven Corporations Ordered to Show Cause After Sister of Head of Firm Files Suit.

The John McMenamy Real Estate & Investment Co., and six corporations which share offices with it at 1308 North Grand boulevard, were directed yesterday by Circuit Judge Charles B. Williams to show cause March 25 why a receiver should not be appointed to take charge of all the corporations.

Judge Williams issued the order after Mrs. May K. Remmers of Kirkwood, sister of Alphonse J. Walsh, president of the McMenamy firm, filed suit alleging that assets of the corporations had been transferred "as needs demanded to bolster the condition of one or the other."

Walsh and Malcolm McMenamy, vice president-treasurer of the McMenamy Co., were arrested last week on warrants charging them with embezzling $417 from a customer.

No Mention of Peggy Joyce in Will.

LONDON, March 12.—Peggy Hopkins Joyce, fiancee of the late Vivian Jackson, amateur steeplechase rider and professor of astro-physics, will receive none of his estate other than proceeds from the sale of horses he gave her. The estate of Jackson, reputed to be a millionaire, was placed at $135,000 in letters of administration granted to his widow yesterday. No will was found. Jackson was killed in a sleighing accident at St. Moritz, Switzerland.

NAZIS DRILLING IN U. S., CONGRESSMAN SAYS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Representative Dickstein (Dem.), New York, told the House Rules Committee yesterday that "Mr. Hitler is trying to create a world war" and that men in America are drilling in uniform under the swastika flag of Germany.

Dickstein, who is chairman of the Immigration Committee, said he could name 100 spies who are attempting to set up a "Fascist government" in this country. Producing pictures and literature he described as propaganda, he added that the Nazis were trying to build up an army in the United States.

"Two hundred thousand are organized now," he declared, "and there will be a million before the year is up."

He said organizations in 14 states, including New York, Michigan, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Ohio specifically, were training men in uniform.

Dickstein said the leader of Nazi forces in the United States is Fritz Kuhn, former chemist for the Ford Motor Co.

He urged action on a resolution for a House investigation of groups or individuals distributing "slanderous or libelous un-American propaganda of religious, racial, or subversive political prejudices which tends to incite to the use of force and violence."

The committee deferred action pending further hearings.

FRITZ KUHN,

Kuhn Admits Society Has 200,000 Members, 80 Local Units.

DETROIT, Mich., March 12. — Fritz Kuhn, former chemist for the Ford Motor Co., denied last night the assertion of Representative Dickstein that he is the designated leader for Adolf Hitler in the United States.

Kuhn, surrounded by emblems bearing the Nazi swastika, sat at his desk in the headquarters of the Amerikadeutscher Volksbund (American German Bund), of which he is Bundesfueher (national leader).

He also denied that the organization is building up a uniformed army in the United States; that Hitler furnished him large funds to propagandize and organize in this country, and that his organization had taken an oath of allegiance to the Nazi Government.

"We have nothing to do with Germany," Kuhn said of the Bund. "We have nothing to do with German Ambassadors or the German Consul here. We get no orders from Germany and have no connection whatsoever with the German Government. The main purpose of our organization is to open the eyes of the American people to the dangers they are facing in the Communistic movement now under way in this country."

Kuhn said the Bund has 80 local units with 200,000 members. He said the Bund was opposed to an anti-Nazi boycott because "we believe it is unconstitutional."

He said he is a naturalized American citizen. He left his job with the motor company last summer for a trip to Germany and has not returned to it as his duties as head of the Bund had kept him busy, he said.

PASTOR SAYS PRESIDENT MAKES 'PERHAPS FATAL MISTAKE'

The Rev. John Haynes Holmes Denounces Court "Device" in Radio Address.

NEW YORK, March 12.—President Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize the Supreme Court was characterized by the Rev. John Haynes Holmes last night as "a clever device of expediency instead of a sober program of reform." Dr. Holmes is pastor of the Community Church in New York.

The President, the Rev. Mr. Holmes said in a broadcast address, "has made his first and perhaps fatal mistake, for this time he is not going to be obeyed, but himself made to obey the will of an outraged people."

Dr. Holmes spoke on a program sponsored by the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government.

Dr. Holmes said the President's proposal was a betrayal of the 1936 Democratic platform pledge of a "clarifying amendment" which would maintain "the letter and spirit of the Constitution." That method of handling the Supreme Court issue, he continued, "is the mandate of the people laid upon the President and accepted by him in the most impressive electoral triumph in the history of the republic."

Hughes' Speed Record Official.

PARIS, March 12.—The International Aeronautical Federation today accepted as official the distance speed record set by Howard Hughes, American millionaire motion picture producer, on his solo flight from Los Angeles to New York Jan. 19. Hughes' average speed was recorded at 526.500 kilometers (327.148 miles) per hour and his time for the flight as 7 hours, 28 minutes and 25 seconds.

MUSSOLINI LANDS IN LIBYA, OPENS 1250-MILE ROAD

Also Inspects Concrete Fortifications, Partly Underground, Along Egyptian Border.

TOBRUK, Libya, March 12.—Legions of Arab Fascist youth presented arms, warships boomed salutes, and airplanes roared overhead today as Premier Mussolini landed from the Cruiser Pola on his first visit to this Italian colony in 10 years. Marshal Italo Balbo, provincial Governor, welcomed him.

Dressed in the uniform of an honorary corporal of the Fascist militia, Mussolini inspected Italy's modern naval and air base and then motored to Porto Bordia on the border.

There he viewed the line of concrete, fortification partly underground, which Italy has erected along the Libyan-Egyptian frontier.

Starting an automobile tour at Amseat, on the Egyptian border, he formally opened the 1250-mile asphalt road which runs the full coastal width of the Province and links Spanish and French North Africa with Egypt. It cost about $5,250,000.

JAPANESE FOREIGN MINISTER REPLIES TO HIS ARMY CRITICS

Seeks to Clarify His Position by Urging "Need for Strengthening Our Armaments."

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, March 12.—Foreign Minister Naotake Sato, criticised by the army for advocating closer relations between Japan and China, sought to clarify his position today by urging "the need for strengthening our armaments."

He explained that his statement to the diet that Japan could avoid international complications by dropping what he called a "provocative attitude" did not mean "Japan should yield submissively to the provocations of other Powers."

Much of Sato's declaration centered about his use yesterday of the word "crisis" in describing Chinese-Japanese relations.

"If the term crisis denotes strained international relations, Japan has been in a crisis ever since the outbreak of the Manchurian incident," he said.

"There is no contradiction that the situation in Manchoukuo (the Japanese-sponsored state which was formerly the Chinese territory of Manchuria) is so tense it may explode momentarily. In this sense, I think Japan's national defense should be completed to meet that situation."

END OF STRIKE VOTED AT AIRCRAFT PLANT

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, March 12. — Striking employes of the Douglas Aircraft Co. voted last night to return to work after Donald W. Douglas, president of the company, agreed to reinstate 297 men.

Douglas said that 12 of the 347 men, indicted on charges of conspiracy after a sit-down strike in the company's plant in Santa Monica, were not employes and, 38 had been identified definitely with acts of violence toward the company or its employes.

An agreement was reached between officers and the United Automobile Workers of America and the Airplane Workers' Union, formerly the Douglas Employers' Association, providing that the 297 found acceptable for reinstatement must sign affidavits declaring they have not participated and will not participate in acts of violence or intimidation.

Douglas' announcement agreeing to re-employment of the 297 came after nearly 5000 employes at meetings voted in favor of the move.

More than 1000 pickets about the Douglas plant cheered the announcement of the agreement and abandoned their lines.

The management of the world's largest aircraft factory earlier announced it had granted virtually all demands of the striking employes.

Douglas told a mass meeting of some 3000 employes the company would accept the United Automobile Workers' Union, affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, as collective bargaining agent for its members. He said all demands of the strikers except a $6-a-week pay increase and unconditional re-instatement of indicted "sit-downers" were acceptable.

Those indicted, Douglas said, would retain their seniority ratings when they are cleared of trespass conspiracy charges or the indictments are dropped.

In his speech, Douglas referred to "gathering war clouds" outside the plant. The greatest number of pickets since the strike started were on duty, stamping their feet in unison. A pamphlet distributed among them said unless an agreement was reached, "this will be the last day of peaceful picketing." Twenty-five Sheriff's deputies had been ordered dispatched to the scene.

In the Douglas negotiations, a five-day, 40-hour week was agreed to, with time and a half for overtime and double time on Saturdays and holidays.

Douglas Aircraft Co. and its subsidiary, Northrop Corporation, granted 5-cents-an-hour blanket wage increases when they reopened March 1. Northrop later agreed to recognize U A W as bargaining agent for its members which a recent election at the plant showed were 61 per cent of the 1095 employes.

Earlier yesterday, the county relief administration refused to supply dole to Douglas strikers "because jobs are open to them."

Sit-down strikers on an employer's property in strikes are trespassing and illegal, Superior Judge Emmet Wilson ruled yesterday when he decided on a demurrer in the $70,000 damage suit of William Plecity, pie shop operator, against the union to which belong a group of his former employes who recently went on a sit-down strike in his shop.

JEWISH NEWS AGENCY WRITER ORDERED OUT OF GERMANY

Boris E. R. Smolar, Naturalized American, Appeals to U. S. Consulate.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 12. — Boris E. R. Smolar, correspondent for the Jewish Telegraph Agency, has been ordered to leave the country. Smolar, a naturalized American, received a letter from the police president instructing him to get out within three days because "your continued stay in Germany is inimical to the interests of the German state."

The letter was delivered by a gestapo (secret police) official. The order also affects Mrs. Smolar. Smolar visited the United States Consulate at once, and was assured vigorous efforts would be made to have the order rescinded.

A member of the Foreign Press Association, Smolar has been away from Berlin for about three months, returning a week ago.

AMERICAN WOUNDED IN SPAIN

Head of Abraham Lincoln Battalion Seriously Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

VALENCIA, Spain, March 12—Robert Meriman, former economics instructor at the University of California at Berkeley, and commander of the Abraham Lincoln Battalion in the Government's international forces, was sent to a hospital at Murcia, on the Mediterranean coast, with serious wounds today. He has a bullet wound in his shoulder and his left arm has been fractured by a shell splinter.

He had been treated previously at a base hospital headed by Dr. Edward Barsky of New York. The base hospital attended many wounded members of the Abraham Lincoln Battalion, composed of Americans who arrived in Spain after the new year, and who served in the fighting on the Jarama front southeast of Madrid last month.

Meriman came to Spain to take over command of the Battalion after having been in Europe two years on a scholarship.

NO POLICE RAID INQUIRY

Chief McCarthy Says Mrs. Henschel Will Drop Matter.

Chief of Police John J. McCarthy anounced today that Mrs. Lucy Henschel, who said yesterday she intended to complain to the Police Board about a raid by city detectives on her apartment, 5639 Julian avenue, last Monday, stated last night that she regretted the publicity and would drop the matter.

Six city detectives on an anonymous tip, searched her apartment for dynamite or machine guns, but found none. She expressed the opinion that "some neighbors" turned in the false tip, Chief McCarthy said.

12 Persons Charged With Possessing Alcohol on Which No Tax Was Paid.

An East St. Louis policeman has been named in a suppressed Federal indictment charging 12 persons with violation of internal revenue laws by possessing and transporting alcohol on which no tax had been paid.

The indictment, returned a week ago by the grand jury, became known yesterday with the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Repple, 4325 Gano avenue, two of the defendants. The names of Paul Vernon Crutchfield, of the Gano avenue address, and Garritt Van Wyk, 1801 Bacon street, on the list of defendants, also were made public as they are at liberty on bond on other liquor charges.

The nature of the operations of the alleged bootleggers and the identities of the others were not disclosed pending arrests. It was learned, however, that the East St. Louis policeman yesterday arrested two persons, at the request of the United States Marshal's office, who were indicted on another charge by the same grand jury which acted against members of the alleged liquor ring.

Repple formerly was a professional bondsman.

TWO WIVES MEET AFTER ARREST OF MAN

Steel Worker Admits He Married No. 2 and Then Returned to No. 1.

Two women, both known as Mrs. Melvin Delmar Durment, met last evening and had a friendly discussion as to Durment, who had just admitted that he married them both, without having been divorced between the two ceremonies.

Durment, 24 years old, a steel worker, of 1532A Deer street, was held on a bigamy charge. He was arrested on leaving his work at the Missouri Rolling Mills, Ecoff avenue and Missouri Pacific tracks.

The second wife, who was Miss Elizabeth Cepak before their marriage at Waterloo, Ill., Sept. 11 last, had not lived with Durment since last November, when she returned to her parents' home, 1509 West Billon avenue. Recently, she told the police, the young daughter of a neighbor told her of having seen Durment with another woman.

She followed up the trail suggested by the child's remarks, and found that the other woman, with whom Durment was living at the Deer street house, was his first and lawful wife. Then she told the police.

The first wife, Mrs. Frieda Durment, said they were married in Hamel, Ill., Feb. 3, 1934. They separated in September, shortly before Durment and Miss Cepak eloped to Waterloo, a fact of which the lawful wife was not informed at the time. She returned to him recently.

Both women said they would testify against Durment. He signed a statement as to the facts, at Mounted District Police Station last night.

ROBBER PUTS EIGHT IN ICE BOX

A holdup man who took $25 last night from the cash register at the tavern of Anthony Crippa, 1367 Hodiamont avenue, after forcing Crippa, his wife and six customers into the icebox, fired a shot at one of the customers who attempted to follow him as he left.

The revolver was aimed at Chester Oertle, 5944 Romaine place, who came out of the icebox before the robber departed. The bullet went wild and the man fled, disappearing in Minerva avenue.

NEUTRALITY BILL BEFORE HOUSE

Resolution Passed Permitting Two Hours of Debate on Measure.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12. — A permanent neutrality bill started through the House today amid discussion of whether the President should have broad discretionary powers in matters relating to foreign wars.

Without a record vote, the House adopted a resolution permitting 10 hours debate on the House measure.

Chairman O'Conner of the Rules Committee, raised a question of whether the bill might not involve America in conflict instead of keeping it free of embroilment.

Without expressing approval or disapproval of the neutrality bill, O'Connor asserted: "We as duly elected representatives should keep our feet on the ground and soberly arrive at a conclusion which is for the best interest of the country."

Then he asked: "Is this proposal such?"

The debate, he said, should clear up whether the neutrality bill passed by the Senate or that approved by the House Foreign Affairs Committee had administration approval. The Senate bill has mandatory provisions.

Before the neutrality issue reached the floor, a group of representatives met to work out strategy for eliminating presidential discretionary powers over shipments of war materials to fighting nations.

The House Committee's bill would continue provisions of the law expiring May 1 forbidding loans, credits and shipments of arms and munitions to belligerent countries. It would bring major civil wars also within range of the neutrality law.

MORE MOONSHINE THAN EVER IN CHICAGO, LAWYER ASSERTS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 12.—Daniel D. Glasser, Assistant United States District Attorney, said today the quantity of bootleg liquor in Chicago surpassed the amount in the days of national prohibition. He called E. C. Yellowley, director of the alcohol tax unit in this area, before a grand jury investigation, charging that Yellowley's agents were arresting small fry but letting the "big shots" slip through their fingers.

"Those combinations and syndicates which flooded Chicago and the Midwest with alcohol and moonshine all during the dry years—and amassed millions doing it—are still in control," Glasser said.

"Yet, my records show not one big name—not even one big affiliation—in all the hundreds of cases that have been sent to the District Attorney's office by the alcohol tax unit."

TAVERN OWNER QUESTIONED IN CASE OF MAN FOUND DEAD

Jefferson County Sheriff Says Dan Niemeyer of East St. Louis Has Been Taken Into Custody.

By the Associated Press.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., March 12.—Sheriff Clyde Mitchell of Jefferson County said today that Dan Niemeyer, East St. Louis tavern proprietor, had been taken into custody for questioning in the death of Martin Pokorney, whose body was found two miles south of here yesterday with a bullet wound in the head.

The Sheriff said Niemeyer was known to have been with Pokorney last week. He said a check-up was made of Pokorney's movements since Wednesday morning after visiting a tavern near here operated by Walter Boelker, who told officers Pokorney was in his tavern Wednesday and sought to buy the establishment, telling him he had $1100 but not with him.

Officers said Pokorney sold his farm about three weeks ago and told friends he would move to St. Louis or East St. Louis.

The body was found yesterday morning lying on the hard road. A pistol with one shell discharged was found beneath the body.

Acquitted in Killing of Policeman.

By the Associated Press.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 12.—Angelo Pedonsi, a stone cutter, was acquitted by a jury last night of the murder of Patrolman Robert H. Dukes. The State had charged Pedonsi killed Dukes in a fight Feb. 9 in an argument over the parking of an automobile. Before the jury took the case, the Judge announced a first-degree murder verdict was not warranted.

KATONAH, N. Y., BANK IS HELD UP AGAIN

3 Men Get $15,000 at Depository That Was Robbed of $17,000 on Feb. 26.

By the Associated Press.

KATONAH, N. Y., March 12.—Three men armed with a sub-machine gun and a pistol held up the Northern Westchester Bank at 12:43 p. m. today, escaping with $15,000 or more. This was the same bank robbed recently by Merle Vandenbush.

The robbers herded eight employes and customers into a vault, seized the money and dashed to a waiting car which crashed through a fence and overturned as they fled. The holdup men took another automobile when the driver stopped and continued their flight north toward Putnam County.

The robbery was almost an exact duplicate of the Vandenbush raid.

The robbery caught Edward Fielder, new president, at his desk. The robber with the machine gun stood at the door of the small lobby and waved five customers into the vault with the president and two employes.

Systematically but in greater haste than Vandenbush, two robbers scooped up coins and bills from the till, the teller's cage and the vault.

"They just about cleaned the place out," an employe said.

The robbers escaped in a car believed to have been stolen. Less than a mile north on the road to Golden Bridge, in the direction of Albany or Danbury, Conn., the car rolled over on a turn and crashed through a fence. They then seized the second car and continued their flight northward, with police in close pursuit.

Vandenbush, former associate of Harry Brunette in crime, pleaded guilty of the earlier robbery yesterday at White Plains. George and Anthony Rera, cousins, also pleaded guilty. Sentence was deferred.

YOUTH PLAYFULLY SCUFFLING FOR REVOLVER SHOT IN NECK

Thomas Offill, 16-year-old Roosevelt High School stndent, was shot through the neck yesterday in a playful scuffle for possession of an "unloaded" revolver. The weapon was discharged when he sought to wrest it from Gay Gifford, manager of a filling station at 1617 Tower Grove avenue, who kept it in a drawer for protection from holdup men. Offill thought he had removed all the cartridges but one remained in the cylinder.

The wounded youth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Offill, 4045 Russell boulevard, and Gifford, 19, 4315A Shaw boulevard, have been friends for many years, they told police. Offill visited the filling station about 3:30 o'clock and in the course of their conversation Gifford displayed the revolver. He laid it on the desk and went to serve a customer and Offill shook out the cartridges.

"Here's your gun, play with it all you want. It's empty," he said when Gifford returned. Each reached for the weapon and the friendly struggle began. The bullet passed through the left side of Offill's neck. At City Hospital it was said his condition was serious. Their account of the incident was confirmed by Edward Peetz, 4400 Gibson avenue, who was in the filling station.

DIVORCES WOMAN WHO LEFT BABY AT NEIGHBOR'S DOOR

Mrs. Wenonah Logan, who left her 7-week-old son on the porch of a neighbor's house in East St. Louis Feb. 28, was divorced in City Judge William F. Borders' court yesterday by Earl F. Logan, chief clerk of the Madison yards of the Litchfield & Madison Railroad, who charged she deserted him in June, 1935. He obtained custody of their seven children and it was agreed he was to cease monthly payments of $75 to her for their support.

The child that was abandoned is being cared for at the St. Clair County Detention Home, Belleville. Mrs. Logan, who did not contest the divorce suit, had said she left the child at the home of Mrs. John E. Shaw, 3226 North Park drive, because she intended to take her own life and wanted the baby to be cared for by a responsible woman. The other children range in age from 3 to 14 years.

SIT-DOWN IN COTTON MILL

150 on Strike in Aurora, Ill., Plant for Union Recognition.

By the Associated Press.

AURORA, Ill., March 12. — One hundred and fifty workers, more than half of them women, started a sit-down strike last night in the Aurora cotton mill. They demanded recognition of their union, the United Textile Workers of America, an American Federation of Labor affiliate.

Company officers said the strike was called shortly after they had offered to reduce working hours from 45 hours weekly to 40 hours with no reduction in wages, but without union recognition.

DIZ WILL ASK FOR VOLUNTARY RETIREMENT "TOMORROW"

"With Me in There Cards Are a Cinch; Without Me, Seven Other Clubs Must Fall Dead."

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 12.—Jerome Herman Dean, the big batter and goose-egg man from Bradenton, is definitely, positively and certainly sure (beyond the peradventure of a doubt) that he isn't going to play any baseball of major league proportions during the coming season of 1937.

Jerome came over to Daytona yesterday to see Sam Breadon. Today he was back at Bradenton, if the night train via Jacksonville and Tampa, was on time. And Jerome was still unsigned.

"There ain't going to be no more conferences," Dizzy explained just before train time, as he reclined on a bed in his room at the Cardinals' hotel and repeatedly told his 9-year-old nephew, Ralph, to shut up, for criminy sakes, so Uncle Jay could think.

Dismal Day Without Dizzy.

"That's the way the conference—the second one—ended. We talked for an hour at 10 o'clock and for about 30 minutes at 2. But we didn't get nowhere. I can't understand this Cardinal organization. Here I am ready to pitch 'em to a pennant. They got a swell chance with me on the job. Without me, seven clubs gotta drop dead for the Cardinals to win. It's the second division sure, without the old Dizzler. And yet Mr. Breadon can't see the light. I said to him that he was just like pitchin' $200,000 out of the window when he refused to give me what I want. Course, it's his business and he can do what he wants with it, but for the life of me I can't understand.

"It's just as well. It positively hurt me to watch them fellows work out to the ball park this afternoon. Gee, I'm glad I don't have to do none of it this year. I'm resting for a year. Do as I please. I'll apply for voluntarily retired tomorrow. Tomorrow afternoon.

"How 'm I gonna live? Don't worry about old Diz. I got a radio contract that pays me $26,000 for the year and I don't have to play nary ball game or be on nary ball club. I broadcast from my home. They call me up and say, Dizzy how are you. And I say fine and they say now you'll hear from Dizzy Dean and I talks for three minutes, right there in my own house, about anything I wants to talk about. Besides I got a little saved up and I don't have to pitch no more baseballs."

What Makes the Dean Blood Boil.

"No, not a cent under $50,000," he replied. "Not for $49,999.99. Of course if they wanted to make a respectable compromise it would be different, but the best they offers me is $25,000. Pooh pooh. That's a big joke. I don't care what they pay Hubbell. Bill Terry would be tickled to death to trade Hubbell for me and throw in $60,000 and they know it dern well. That's what makes my blood boil when they tell me that not a manager in the big leagues would have me on their ball club."

Between conferences, Dizzy had a nice clean white suit pressed, put it on and went to the ball park, as he mentioned. He was photographed in the clubhouse greeting Frisch and his old teammates and then Dizzy found his way to the field and mounted the pitching mound. Joe Medwick, always with a bat in his hand, was at the plate, and white suit and all, Dizzy got a ball and glove and soon was pitching to Jersey Joe. And the second ball he threw was as neat a slow curve as you ever saw. Dizzy doesn't have to do any spring training. Just a week or two, to get the muscles accustomed to the feel of the game's actions, and he'll be ready.

Can't Make Book on Dizzy.

So perhaps there's nothing to worry about. Perhaps in a week or two, after the Cuban trip, he will make another call at Daytona Beach, and sign a contract for that paltry $25,000. Or perhaps he really will retire. Who knows about Dizzy Dean?

"We got nowhere at the conferences," President Breadon announced after Dizzy had departed. "I made him no compromise offer and he did not indicate that he wanted to make a counter proposition. All he talked about was $50,000. I explained that we couldn't afford to pay that kind of a salary. And I also informed him that if his delay in signing interfered with his spring training, his salary would not begin until he was in condition to pitch."

Mixed Doubles Contest.

A handicap mixed doubles bowling contest will be held at the Cinderella Recreation tomorrow and Sunday with squads bowling at 7 p. m. each day. Entry fee is $1.60 and reservations can be made by calling Larry Jouett or Walter Kerr, PRospect 8751.

Meet Mr. Collins of the Cubs

WRAY'S COLUMN

All Eyes on the Pitchers.

SAN ANTONIO, March 12.

WHILE developing a team punch is almost an obsession with Hornsby, it's the pitching that is really giving the Browns' pilot most concern. As soon as the staff soupbones become limbered up for real work he will begin sorting and classifying the 13 regular and half a dozen casual flingers now with the squad.

The 23-player limit makes it imperative that Hornsby trim his staff to eight or possibly nine men at the most, if three catchers are carried. At this writing, the competition for pitching berths appears almost certain to be confined to the 13 members now signed to Browns' contracts. Possibly Howard Mills, signed with San Antonio, will finally make the grade.

Thomas, Hildebrand, Hogsett, Koupal, Tietje, Van Atta, Knott, Caldwell and possibly Blake are likely to be brought as far as St. Louis for the opening of the American League campaign, which leaves only Jackuki, Kimberlin, Liebhardt, Walkup and Mills fighting for a break in the veteran ranks. It won't take a Hubbell or a Dean to crash the first nine. Improvement by any of the last five mentioned would almost certainly earn him a trial at the start of the campaign.

Competition Is at Low Ebb.

COMPETITION for berths with the club will be at low ebb this year, because of standout players available for a majority of positions. Hemsley is certain to be the first string catcher. The second string man or men (in case three catchers are retained throughout the year) will result in a contest between Tommy Heath; Angelo Giuliani and perhaps a rugged young Pennsylvanian, Benny Huffman, not now on the team's regular roster.

For infield berths there will be two mild battles. Bottomley will have Harry Davis trying to displace him at first base—and what a job Davis will have, if Bottomley's props carry him around the way he is going at present. Bottomley's batting power will give him first call.

Carey at second will have important opposition from Gerard Lipscomb, a highly regarded player with Atlanta last season. Carey was not at his best in 1936 and will have to step lively this season to keep his position.

The outfield is all set, with Allen, Roy Bell, Vosmik and West certain of regular posts, with the fifth man either Mazzera or Coleman, Coleman probably will get the call.

Even this early in the training period it is possible to name all but half a dozen men who will make up the midseason quota of 23 players—that is, unless deals not now contemplated are made.

Tietje May Come Through.

LESLIE TIETJE, 25-year-old righthander, obtained last year from the White Sox, is attracting official attention in workouts here. Tietje's physical appearance is causing the comment as he has not let himself out in pitching, as yet.

Last year Tietje was sick. He scaled only 160 pounds. Today he weighs 180 or more and it appears to be all hard muscle. The scouts and coaches expect him to show improvement over his record of three victories and five defeats last season. He may prove the answer to Hornsby's prayer for a pitching ace.

It Can't Be Done.

YOU'VE heard about the man who spent his winter building himself a motor yacht in his cellar, only to find that he would have to tear down a wall to get it out of the basement.

Well, Mike Kelley, of the Minneapolis club, is one up on that one. The Millers are training 30 miles from here at New Braunfels, where the Browns will play their first game next Sunday. Mike tells this one:

"When we started to get ready for our workouts at batting practice, the groundkeeper began to put up the cage. But it poured rain and he took the parts inside a nearby dance hall. There he thought he might as well keep busy assembling it. He got it all set up.

"But 'say, guy,' asked one of the players, "how are you going to get it outside?"

Just a problem in mathematics how you can get a 12-foot cage through a three-foot doorway?

There being no such thing as a fourth dimension to that cage, it had to come down again and go through the door in sections.

Meet Pep Hornsby.

A HARD-JAWED, agate-eyed fellow with an equator as big as Santa Claus' stands out behind the pitcher during batting practice. He has a satchel full of baseballs and feeds them to the pitchers at need.

He looks like a hammered-down, well-fed, duplicate of Hornsby. In fact, he is Hornsby. This is Everett "Pep" Hornsby, Rogers' brother, now acting as scout for the Browns.

"Pep" was a baseball player himself in bygone days, but he never climbed the heights his brother attained. He was a pitcher and his forte was a spitball. He threw it for the Kansas City club during 1912-13.

Scouting on a Big Basis.

THE scouting department of the new Browns has been put on an up-to-date basis under the new owners. No fewer than seven men are now ivory hunting in all sections of the country. Besides Pep Hornsby, the list includes Ray Cahill, Pat Monahan, Willis Butler, Charley De Witt, Charley Stis and Jack Fournier.

Each has a separate territory and the entire country is blanketed. Traveling by auto, they will comb the country ready to pounce on talent in all sections and ship the resultant catch to the many "farms" or affiliates in the minor leagues, with which the Browns are now working.

COLLINSVILLE IS EASY VICTOR IN EAST SIDE MEET

Handicapped by the loss of three regular players the greater portion of the last half, East St. Louis High School's basketball team lost a hard fought 40-38 decision to Hillsboro in the feature game of last night's Illinois sectional tournament play at Belleville. Collinsville outclassed Greenville, 51-23, to advance to the semifinals.

Tonight's semifinal schedule sends Dupo against Wood River at 7:30 o'clock and Collinsville against Hillsboro at 8:30 o'clock. Victors tonight meet in the final at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night for the championship.

Ed Wondolowski, East Side center, sprained his ankle in the last play of the second quarter and did not take the floor in the second half. Berkley Halstead, forward, retired on personal fouls in the early minutes of the third quarter, while Billy Duhadway, guard, left the game on personals in the last quarter.

East St. Louis led Hillsboro until the final two minutes of play. Leading at the end of each quarter, 16-11, 25-22 and 32-28, East St. Louis counted only six points in the final period, while the victors scored 12 to eke out the victory. Ford Lipe, forward, totaled 23 points for the victor, while Peppy Kruta collected 15 and Ted Fuido 12 for the losers.

Walt Evers, Collinsville's scoring threat, made 16 points in his 10 minutes of action against Greenville. Ten of Evers' points were made in the first three minutes of play.

JOE DI MAGGIO ACCEPTS TERMS WITH YANKEES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Joe DiMaggio, sensational sophomore outfielder of the world champion New York Yankees, today came to terms for the 1937 season.

Col. Jacob Rupper, owner of the club, announced DiMaggio had accepted the club's offer, understood to call for a salary of $15,000 and an increase of $6500 over last year's pay to the youthful slugger.

DiMaggio had asked for $17,500. In notifying Col. Ruppert of his acceptance, DiMaggio advised he will leave San Francisco by airplane tomorrow, and reach the training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., by Monday.

Gehrig and Ruppert are reported to be $4000 apart, with Lou demanding $40,000 and the Colonel naming $36,000 as his top offer. Ruffing, reducing his demands to around $18,000, has been offered $15,000.

DiMaggio, rated one of the greatest young outfielders to break into the majors in years, hit .323 last season, belted 29 home runs and drove in 126 markers.

Mack Announces Moses Has Agreed to Terms.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, D. F., March 12.—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, announced today Wally Moses, outfielder who had been holding out for a reported salary of $10,000, had agreed to terms.

Mack, who had offered Mosese $8000, did not announce the terms.

Flyers in Final Road Contest of Season Tonight

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 12.—Johnny MacKinnon's St. Louis Flyers will play their final road game of the season when they oppose the Minneapolis Millers in an American Hockey Association match here tonight.

The Flyers and Millers will be playing for the second time within four days, the Northerners having outscored the Mound Cityans, 8 to 6, Tuesday night.

The St. Louisans will oppose Wichita in their final game of the regular playing season Sunday night at St. Louis.

MICKEY OWEN TO CATCH, WARNEKE PITCH AS CARDS OPPOSE GIANTS

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 12.—Frankie Frisch and his Cardinals, in excellent condition after only 11 days of spring training, were on their way to Miami today to catch a boat this evening for Havana, where two exhibition games will be played tomorrow and Sunday with Bill Terry's Giants, champions of the National League.

Twenty-one players and Coach Mike Gonzales were in the party. Manager Frisch announced his pobable starting lineup for the first game and it easily could be the one that he will use on the opening day of the season.

Johnny Mize will be at first base, Frisch or Al Cuccinello at second, Leo Durocher at short and Don Gutteridge at third base. In the outfield Don Padgett, the most promising recruit in the Cardinals spring camp, will take the place of Terry Moore, the prospective regular, who remained at Daytona Beach because of a slight leg injury and a weakness against rolling ships. Joe Medwick and Pepper Martin will complete the outfield.

Lon Warneke, the brilliant righthander obtained from the Cubs in exchange for Roy Parmelee and James "Ripper" Collins was named as one of the probable pitchers and he may have the honor of starting the first game. He is not likely to work more than three innings, however, and Morton Cooper and Ira Smith are slated to divide the day's hurling duties with the former Cub.

Mickey Owen is scheduled to be the first catcher, with Paul Chervinko, ready to relieve Mickey at half time. A last minute change in the personnel of the squad was made when Frisch took Martin Marion off the list. Frank had planned to give the Cuban fans a chance to see the youngster's fancy fielding, but as he is not slated to remain with the Red Birds it was considered wiser to leave him at home and let prospective members of the 1937 Cardinal squad get as much work as possible.

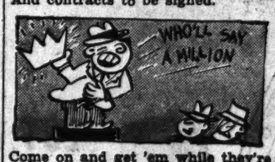

Pitcher Ray Harrell, who underwent an operation for appendicitis March 1, reported this morning and said he expected to be able to start training in a few days. He also hopes to be able to pitch early in the season.

Ouch, That Split Lip.

Joe Gould, who has Jim Braddock signed up for a fight with Max Schmeling under the auspices of Madison Square Garden on June 8, and for one with Joe Louis in Chicago on June 22, now has under consideration an offer to fight Max Schmeling in Berlin, date still open. Looks like a three-cornered fight with Max Schmeling in this corner, Jim Braddock in that corner and Joe Louis in the other corner with John Law acting as referee.

THE scraps of paper strew the ground
Like chaff before the wind.
Now is the time for all good men
To hand Joe Gould a fountain pen,
And contracts to be signed.

Come on and get 'em while they're hot,
At Mister Braddock's crown.
S. make your offer for the fight,
The line will form upon the right—
Come folks, let's go to town!

Max Schmeling's offer for a fight in Berlin is made in behalf of the Deutschland Halle A. C. But as Joe Gould is already in Dutch with a couple of other clubs he may hesitate before signing, glutton for punishment though he be.

Of course, Joe Gould is only doing what "big business" does every day, but his methods are crude. He lacks finesse and that delicacy of touch and nuance of shading that characterizes the inner workings of our best corporations.

A Quaint Old Custom.

LOU GEHRIG, lusty son of clout,
On Col. Jake is holding out
For a substantial fee.
As no agreement they could make,
The "Iron Man" and Col. Jake
Agreed to disagree.

The best of "Iron Men."
And when the robin starts to sing
A lilting roundelay of spring—

Not Consistent.

Babe Ruth picks the Cards and Yankees for the world series, which is pretty nice picking. Then he took an awful slump and picked the Browns and Athletics to fight it out for seventh place. Not so good.

Babe either hasn't been reading the glowing accounts from the Browns' training camp in San Antonio or he doesn't believe what he reads in the papers.

Oh, well, Babe has been out of the game for a couple of years and maybe golf has taken the edge off his sense of baseball values.

As far as we know Olive Twist was the first holdout in history. He held out his platter for more and all he got was the bum's rush.

One of the rules of the New York Athletic Board forbids a fighter from being seconded by his father or brother. However, there is no law against one guy making the other say "Uncle."

Browns' Hope of Better Pitching Centers in Hildebrand and Koupal

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 12.—Oral Hildebrand, long, lean and grave of countenance, altitude 6 feet 3 inches, is being eyed rather anxiously in practice here by Hornsby and the Browns' coaches, who are eager for the time when this right-hander begins pouring them over the plate in earnest.

Hildebrand, now 28 years old, is carrying the burden of Hornsby's hope of an improved pitching staff.

The former Clevelander is doing all that could be asked thus far. He hasn't turned loose yet, but a continuation of the fine weather that has prevailed here since the team's arrival will soon fit him for real work.

Although he won only 10 games last year, that does not represent Hildebrand's real ability. With a punch back of him he is regarded as a 15 to 20 victory hurler. And Hornsby already is classifying him as such for the coming season.

Koupal Must Have Something.

Hildebrand has been referred to an "temperamental," in explanation of his failure to perform better last year. But he seems anything but that in camp.

Koupal, another new "hope" who has been up three or four times to the majors and is returning for another try at the age of 33, is also getting a good looking over by the boss. On his 1936 record with Seattle he was the big winner of all the members of the Browns' staff. He turned in 23 victories and lost only 11.

He shows a nice, easy delivery in his workouts here and he seems to have the poise of a veteran major leaguer. In the past Coast League stars who have come to the Browns with fine records have not shown so much. Koupal may be the exception.

Youngsters Go Farming.

The men are shedding weight and yesterday they appeared to slow up as a result of sore "dogs" and arms. They'll be over that in time for the first game, Sunday.

Weeding out the squad already has begun. Today seven of the farm hands were dispatched to the Browns' farm training camp at Laredo where three clubs are working. One of those sent away was a St. Louis boy, Harold Snyder, a semi-pro catcher. Another batch will hit the highway after Sunday's contest with Minneapolis.

San Antonio is all heated up over the hitting of Hornsby two days ago when he fairly mashed the old apple, hitting two homers and other safe drives. "Hornsby hits comeback trail" was one black streamer spread across a local sport page.

Hornsby merely grinned when shown the spread. "Maybe I will hit it—you never can tell. I'll play if they want me to," he commented.

By "they" Hornsby meant the club owners who figure he has a box office attraction when in the lineup.

Ethan Allen An Author.

Ethan Allen, who will be one of the alternate outfielders for the club this year, is about to become an author. He is working on a book on how to play baseball, in which each position will be treated by a major league star specializing in each branch of play.

The idea originated with a Columbia University professor where Allen was taking a post graduate course (he's a graduate of the University of Cincinnati). The professor, due to lack of time, abandoned his plan after Allen had helped him. Allen picked up where the professor left off. Now the book is nearing completion.

"There's nothing adequate now on the market that tells authoritatively how to play baseball," Allen says. "I think my book will be a helpful contribution."

Sam West, Brownie center fielder who arrived last night, is expected to be out for practice today although he is not due to work out until March 14 when the second squad of Brownies is scheduled to report. West signed his contract some time ago. He reported, as usual, in excellent condition.

Mungo Signs Contract

By the Associated Press.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 12.—Van Lingle Mungo, fireball righthand pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, ended his holdout yesterday by signing for 1937 at a salary believed to be $15,000.

Although no announcement of terms was made, the big strikeout star of the Dodgers was said to have won his salary fight with the Brooklyns, who had insisted he sign for $14,500, while he held out for $500 more.

MEXICO CITY.—Harry Kelley of Wynne, Ark., star righthanded pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics, obtained permission to train at New Braunafels, Tex., instead of Mexico City. Kelley asked the chance because of inability to reduce. He will work out with the Minneapolis team of the American Association at New Braunsfels and rejoin the A's April 2, when they play Minneapolis in an exhibition game.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Manager Steve O'Neill asserted after catching the offerings of Bob Feller, the Cleveland Indians' youthful strikeout artist: "I've been around baseball nearly 30 years and I've never seen a better change of pace."

Buck Newsom Is Ready.

ORLANDO, Fla. — Washington hitters had trouble finding the ball yesterday. The answer was that Buck Newsom ascended the mound and sizzled curves over the plate. This was something new to the hitters who for past days had been feasting off the offerings of rookie hurlers. Newsom refused to let up, explaining he had had two weeks workout in South Carolina and "never had a sore arm in my life."

CATALINA ISLAND, Cal.—Manager Charlie Grimm of the Cubs had his first look at rookie outfielder Joe Marty and expressed pleasure over Marty's batting style and evident power. He is the only rookie given a chance to make the regular team.

PASADENA, Cal.—Manager Jim Dykes drove the White Sox regulars, putting Appling, Hayes and Bonura through a stiff session under a hot sun. A few cases of sore feet were reported but Dykes insists there be no letup in drills.

HAVANA.—If the Giants' spring training exhibitions are any indication, the National League champions are going to have the same old trouble this year: No hitting. In seven games against Cuban opposition, they've scored only 21 runs, and yesterday collected only five hits in a 12-inning tie with the Cuban Professional All-Stars.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Old Pat Malone, the investment that paid dividends to Manager Joe McCarthy, will be back at the old stand as relief hurler No. 1 for the Yankees this year. He pitched three innings of hitless, runless ball for the "regulars" in the first intra-squad game yesterday.

TAMPA, Fla.—General Manager Warren C. Giles of Cincinnati Reds said today he had wired the club's "final offer" to holdout hurler Don Brennan. "We've been fair with him," said Giles, "and I told him, too, that I thought he needed as much work if not more, than any member of the squad."

ORLANDA, Fla.—Manager Bucky Harris of the Washington Nationals promised today to "give Joe McCarthy a piggy-back ride from Yankee Stadium to Brooklyn" if the New York club wins the pennant by 19 games again. "Sure, you got to give the Yanks the call as the heavy favorite," he said, "but they're going to have some woe."

LAKELAND, Fla.—Mickey Cochrane, despite his own admission that he will not play the full season, is unworried over Detroit Tigers' catching. Of George Tebbetts, comparative newcomer who was with the team last year, Cochrane said: "He'll be one of the great catchers of baseball." He also has Ray Hayworth and rookie Mike Kresh.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The Boston Bees' pitchers appear so far ahead of the club's hitters that Manager Bill McKechnie cancelled today's scrub game for a long batting drill. The regulars turned back the Yannigans yesterday, 5-3.

SARASOTA, Fla.—The reports of Bobby Doerr's progress appear to have disturbed Ossie Melillo, for that veteran second sacker arrived four days ahead of the deadline and today he will start batting the San Diego rookie for whatever slice of the second base job Manager Joe Cronin doesn't want.

FORMER BEAUMONT PITCHING STAR WILL JOIN HOUSTON CLUB

Marvin Quante, 3915A Labadie avenue, a southpaw pitcher, who performed for Huntington, W. Va., in the Middle Atlantic League last season, left this morning for the training camp of the Houston club of the Texas League.

Quante, who graduated from Beaumont High School here and pitched in the South End amateur league in 1934, will be starting his third season in the professional ranks. He won 13 games for Huntington in 1936 after making the spring training trip with the Cardinals. He is 20 years old.

BASKETBALL NOTES

VINES PICKS PERRY TO DEFEAT TILDEN IN COMING SERIES

PRO CHAMPION PLAYS ENGLISH TENNIS ACE AT ARENA TONIGHT

Former British Davis Cup Star Has One-Up Lead Over American After First 29 Battles.

Fred Perry and Ellsworth Vines were in a jovial mood today as they made ready to show St. Louisans how the best professionals in the world play tennis. They meet tonight at the Arena in the thirtieth encounter of their tour.

They appeared in good health, recovered, they said, from illness which kept them off form in the earlier matches this year. In the 29 they have played before almost 150,000 persons, Perry has won 15. The attendance estimate was by Vines, who said the exact figures were being recorded by the promoter in New York.

It was suggested they must be making a lot of money.

"Oh, yes," said Perry, the dark and handsome British cup player who dropped his amateur standing to go on tour with Vines.

"I'm surprised no one has called me a millionaire. There have been all sorts of guesses but no one has thought of that yet.

"They say I make 99 cents out of every dollar we take in. Well, it isn't true. I make only 98 cents." He laughed. "The income tax man certainly is going to think something's wrong. He'll wonder where all those thousands of dollars I'm supposed to be making disappeared."

Perry is to play Bill Tilden in a series of five matches, beginning March 28 at New York. Vines is picking his present partner to beat Big Bill.

In more serious vein, Perry said it will be 10 years before open tournaments will be held. The younger generation will bring that about when it steps into the ranks of officials, he believes. As for this year's Davis Cup matches, Germany will reach the final round of the European zone competition, Perry said.

On May 15, Vines and Perry will go to Europe for a few matches in London and Paris and will return to the States in July for avacation.

Besides the feature match, tonight's schedule will be opened at 8:30 p. m. with a meeting between George Lott and Bruce Barnes, members of the Perry-Vines tour. In the final match on the program Perry and Vines will play Lott and Barnes.

PRESIDENT TO SEEK CHANGES IN A. B. C. LAW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The all-time high entry list and prize money for the current American Bowling Congress annual championships have given officials ideas about making the event in future a $300,000 affair, without the top-heavy number of performers.

William H. Pollack of Buffalo, N. Y., explained the possibilities today in disclosing an amendment he plans to propose at the annual convention of the A. B. C. April 2.

Pollack is a former A. B. C. president and one of bowling's "big shots" for a quarter century. His idea, which would change the set up of the annual "congress" championship completely, calls primarily for an increase in the entry fee from $25 to $50 for each five-man team.

"It is my opinion," he said, "that with the increased entry fee and the prize money thus doubled, we would build up a tournament of upwards of 2000 teams—all in regular competition. We would have an entry fee of approximately $300,000 and could make our annual tournaments more attractive to teams from coast to coast.

"Elimination of a good portion of the so-called 'booster' teams and placing only the better teams in the meet would tend to increase attendance and place the A. B. C. in real championship class.

"At our present rate of annual increase, the show is getting too big and we will soon be coming to a point where it is impossible to obtain a building for a sufficient length of time to schedule all the teams entered. The event is getting unwieldy."

This year's competition has attracted 4017 five-man teams—more than 20,000 keglers. It began Wednesday and won't wind up until May 4.

Last night's competition was given over to the so-called "booster" teams, none of which threatened the leading mark of 2881, posted by Jersey City's royal recreation Pabst team Wednesday night.

BILLIKEN HOCKEY TEAM WINS AMATEUR TITLE

The St. Louis University Billikens were declared champions of the St. Louis Amateur Hockey League when a scheduled game last night failed to materialize. The Billikens finished the season with seven victories, one defeat and three ties.

SPRINTS TO END 6-DAY BICYCLE EVENT TONIGHT

By Robert Morrison.

The heat was on today for the boys who have been riding bicycles around the Auditorium board track. The wearying six-day grind was in its last day and wheels began to hum as Fred Spencer and Frank Keating attempted to hold their one-lap advantage on the field.

Just behind the leaders were four teams, including the favored Gustave Kilian and Heinz Vopel of Germany, who were expected to make this their fourteenth victory in the last 16 races they have ridden during the last year or so.

They'll have to push for all they're worth, however. Charley Winter and Fred Ottevaere, Henri Le Page and Albert Heaton and Jack Sheehan and Henry O'Brien, in the second place tie early today, will make things interesting for the speeding Germans.

There were two other teams with more than an outside chance. Reggie Fielding and Harold Nauwens were only a few laps out of the lead, as were Charley Yaccino and Dominick Camastro.

Those Last-Hour Sprints.

The high tension of the last day will reach its peak in the last hour, solid with action, which will bring the wheel marathon to an end around 11:30 o'clock tonight.

The mad dash to the end of nowhere in that final hour is brought about not only by desire to gain a lap lead but to roll up the total of sprint points. First place in every sprint brings 72 points as compared to the six awarded throughout the week and 12 awarded today in the two series of 10 sprints each.

Thus, if there is a lap tie at the finish, the winning team in the final sprints will undoubtedly capture the race. Early in the day Kilian and Vopel held a sprint point advantage of almost 200, but it might easily be overcome.

The Germans lost their lead in laps last night when Spencer and Keating gained two laps in a jam that saw Winter and Ottevaere, Fielding and Nauwens and Le Page and Heaton better their positions by one lap.

Kilian Wins From Audy.

Kilian won a match race event from Jules Audy of New York. Audy took the first of three one-mile dashes, Kilian the other two—all decided by an eyelash.

Ed Burke, manager of the Auditorium, said the total attendance for the race so far was 29,705 paid and for last night, 3592.

Reggie McNamara, old warhorse, is itching to get back in the fight. He says he will ride at Louisville, March 30. He's been working out and feels strong enough to go back into the game he left a year ago. He is 52 years old.

"ONE-PLAY" O'BRIEN, FORMER IRISH STAR, KILLED IN ACCIDENT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 12.—John J. "One Play" O'Brien, 31, assistant football and track coach at Notre Dame University, was killed early today when his automobile crashed into a railway viaduct pillar.

O'Brien was enroute to his South Bend (Ind.) home after a speaking engagement at Harvard, Ill., when the accident occurred.

He earned the sobriquet "One Play" in 1928 against the Army by catching a 40-yard touchdown pass on his first play of the game to upset the cadets, 12 to 7. The late Coach Knute Rockne pulled him out immediately after the feat.

O'Brien was named end coach at his alma mater last year. He also handled the sprinters, hurdlers and high jumpers on the track squad. Previously he served as assistant football coach at Annapolis for two years and was head gridiron mentor at St. Edward's College at Austin, Tex.

He was graduated from Notre Dame in 1931 after competing in track and football for three years.

AVERILL AND INDIANS FAIL TO AGREE TO TERMS

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, March 12.—The salary dispute between C. C. Slapnicka, general manager of the Cleveland Indians, and Earl Averill, slugging holdout outfielder, neared a climax today as Slapnicka packed his bags to leave for the New Orleans training camp.

A matter of $1000 stood between them, the militant outfielder said after a two-hour conference produced no agreement. Averill, who said he was offered $15,000, declared he would not accept less than $16,000, or $2500 more than he received last season.

The Browns of 1922.

DAYTONA BEACH, March 12.

GEORGE SISLER, in the Cardinal camp for a brief vacation, was talking baseball with a group of St. Louisans and of course the conversation quickly got around to 1922 when the Browns almost won the American League pennant. George, one of the greatest hitters of all time, was in the thick of that pennant fight. Did he remember it?

"I'll never forget it," George grinned. "That was quite a season. Lee Fohl did a great job with a mediocre pitching staff that year. That was Fohl's forte in my opinion. He knew pitching, pitchers and how to handle them."

"I was against that move at the time," George admitted, "but there was good logic in what Fohl did. Elmer Smith was coming up to hit for somebody and Smith always had hit Davis hard. Fohl knew that, and that was the sole reason he had for taking Davis out. When Davis was taken out, McNally batted instead and sacrificed. Smith wouldn't have sacrificed. There's no telling what might have happened if Davis had stayed in there."

Remember Dave Danforth.

SOMEBODY mentioned freak pitching and of course that turned the conversation to the mysterious Dave Danforth, the southpaw who was always in hot water because umpires and opposing players thought he was "doing something" to the ball, that is pitching illegally. Did George ever find out what Danforth did, if he did anything?

"Danforth never told anybody anything," Sisler remembered. "But I'm convinced in my own mind as to what he did. He didn't do anything illegal. Whenever he rubbed that ball against his uniform, that was just an act, just done for effect. He didn't cut the ball or rough the ball, or fill the seams or loosen the cover. That would have been illegal. All he did was to pitch a natural sailer. He could take a brand new ball, grip it without any formality except a casual inspection and throw a sailer with it.

"How did he do it? I think Danforth had found by study that the grain of the leather cover had a sort of nap on it. When he held the ball a certain way he got a sailer, by reason of the nap on the leather cover meeting the air in a certain way. Only a pitcher who can throw a straight overhand or dead side-arm can do it. But we experimented with the sailer and several of us found that we, too, could make the ball sail. But Danforth could make it sail whenever he wanted it to sail."

ST. LOUIS fans still remember the difficulties under which Danforth labored. Umpires were constantly examining the ball when he pitched. Opposing managers were forever running from dugouts to protest. Even Danforth's manager wouldn't stand back of him in the controversies.

"Danforth was a high-class fellow," Sisler said. "I always sympathized with him and stood up for him. I'll never forget a game in Detroit that almost ended in a riot while Danforth was pitching. Lou Blue was coaching at first base and every time Danforth threw a good strike, Blue would throw his glove high in the air, as a protest that Dave was pitching illegally.

"The game got down to the ninth inning. We were leading by a run, with the bases filled, two out and Ty Cobb at bat. Blue was throwing that glove and Jimmy Austin said the next time Blue threw it, he (Austin) would put a stop to it. Cobb worked his string to three and two and Dave put the next one through for a strike. Cobb fanned, and up in the air went Blue's glove. Austin was out of the dugout with the pitch and he caught Blue's glove as it came down and threw it high into the upper deck of the grandstand.

"There was a rush of Detroit players for Austin, who by that time was in our dugout. Harry Heilmann rushed Jimmy, players grabbed bats and I thought for a minute there was going to be a free-for-all scrap. But at the height of the excitement, Heilmann saw the funny side of it and started to laugh, and in a second, instead of a good brawl, it became a big joke and we all went to our clubhouses without any heads being cracked. But I don't think Blue ever threw that glove again, while Austin was in the dugout."

Charter Cycling Club Members Get Life Memberships

The four charter members of the St. Louis Cycling Club tods ' own a distinction never before accorded members of the organization. They were voted life memberships in the club at last night's golden anniversary banquet.

The members so honored were George E. Tivey, Herman Wolzendorf, Emil Rotty and Al Jordan. With the exception of Jordan all were at the fiftieth anniversary celebration.

More than 200 members and guests attended the dinner, held at Van Horn's. Included in the out-of-town visitors were Reggie McNamara, six-day bike rider; J. W. Warnken of Milwaukee, Otto Eisele of New York, president of the American Bicycle League and A. L. Everard of New York, president of the Century Road Club of America.

LITTLE AND MANERO LEAD REVOLTA AND PICARD AFTER 18 HOLES

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 12.—Lawson Little and Tony Manero came out of a battle of eagles with a two-up lead over Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta today at the half-way point in the 36-hole final of the International Four-ball Golf Tournament.

ALHAMBRA GROTTO PIN MEET TO OPEN APRIL 3

The thirteenth annual Alhambra Grotto handicap bowling tournament will open at the Grotto alleys, 2626 South Grand bl., April 3, with the entry list closing March 20.

The tourney, consisting of teams doubles and singles, will be rolled on a 75 per cent handicap basis and is sanctioned by the American Bowling Congress.

All teams in the Greater St. Louis district are invited to participate. Entries can be filed by calling Walter Westerman, FLanders 6252, or the Grotto, LAclede 8349.

TWO PLACES IN STATE MEET TO BE DECIDED

With the right to participate in the Missouri State High School Athletic Association basketball tournament as a reward for victory, Christian Brothers College and Country Day will battle tonight at the Washington University Field House at 8 o'clock. At the same time Beaumont can become the City High School League representative in the State tournament provided it defeats Central at St. Louis University.

C. B. C. was the runner-up in the "A" division tournament decided last week, losing to St. Louis U. High, while Country Day defeated Ferguson in the "B" class final. Past records slightly favor a victory for the Brothers.

Beaumont and Central are involved in a three-way play-off for the city title, the third school being McKinley. Both Central and McKinley have lost one game in the play-offs, whereas Beaumont won its lone engagement. A victory for the Blue Jackets then would make it the only undefeated school in the play-offs.

Should Central win and again throw the standings into a tie, it is probable that the other two schools will toss a coin to see which goes to Columbia. Central already has announced that it will not participate in the State meet.

Joe Louis Stops Two Opponents in Exhibition Bouts

By the Associated Press.

Louis was awarded a victory over Seal Harris, paunchy, 260-pound Chicago Negro, after a minute of the second round. Harris went down six times before he climbed through the ropes rather than take any more punishment.

Louis then took on Eddie Melchome, a sparring partner, flattening him early in the second round of their first bout after knocking him down twice previously.

CLEVELAND AND RED SOX IN SERIOUS DIFFICULTY

Averill, Allen and Sullivan Are Sticking Fast—National Has Only Eight Holdouts, All Star Players

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The American League, traditionally the timid Tory of the baseball world, has 12 rebel holdouts to the National's eight, an Associated Press survey revealed today.

Every club in the majors except the New York Giants, Detroit Tigers and Washington Senators has at least one belligerent, and the wealthy Boston Red Sox have more than anybody else with four.

The two most serious holdouts are, of course, Jerome Herman Dean of the Cards, who is the loudest, and Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees, who is the quietest. Dean, the only Cardinal not signed, is financially farther away from signing than anybody else. He has demanded $50,000 and has been offered $22,500, plus a bonus.

One new revelation was made in the Yankee situation today. Owner Jacob Ruppert said Pitcher Red Ruffing had lowered his demands from $30,000 to $18,000. He was offered $15,000. The only tardy Yankee is Gehrig. He is asking $50,000; has been offered $36,000.

The four Red Sox holdouts are Eric McNair, who was given a slight increase over last year's salary; Roger Cramer, who was asked to take a slight cut, and Johnny Kroner and Jack Russell, both slashed badly.

Cleveland in Tough Spot.

The Cleveland Indians are the only other American League team with more than one holdout. They have three: Earl Averill, who thinks his 1936 batting record of .378 entitles him to $17,500; Pitcher Johnny Allen and Catcher Billy Sullivan.

Young Sullivan hit .351 in 93 games last year, but his receiving was ninth among the 12 regular catchers in the league. This, reasons Boss Cy Slapnicka, scarcely entitles the lad to the 100 per cent increase he is said to be asking. Averill and the club are so far apart he has been told he can make a deal with any other club to trade himself.

The St. Louis Browns, Philadelphia Athletics, and Chicago White Sox each have a single headache. Beau Bell wants the Browns to pay him $15,000 and they have offered him exactly half that much. Merritt (Sugar) Cain has asked the White Sox for $8000, and they have countered with $6000. And Wally Moses of the Athletics wants $10,000, which is $2000 more than Connie Mack says he'll pay.

In the National, practically all the holdouts are stars. The Dodgers, with First Baseman Buddy Hassett out, seem to be having more trouble with less reason than anybody else. Brooklyn officials and player are only $500 apart. Hassett wants $8000 and the Dodgers insist on $7500. This situation is expected to be cleared up soon, even if the Dodger fans have to take up a collection.

Babe Herman and High Water.

Another strange situation exists in Cincinnati where the only holdouts are the irrepressible Floyd (Babe) Herman and Pitcher Don Brennan. A high salaried player for years, Herman was asked to take an amputation, and refused. General Manager Warren Giles has announced, however, that the Reds will be able to open in spite of Herman and high water.

ARMSTRONG IS 2-1 FAVORITE OVER BELLOISE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The betting boys on boxing boulevard figure Henry Armstrong won't have much trouble putting Mike Belloise away in his eastern fistic debut at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Odds-layers were quoting anywhere from 8-5 to 2-1 today on the St. Louis Negro, who was recognized in California and several other states as featherweight champion when he whipped Belloise in Los Angeles last October.

The bout promises to be nearly as entertaining a spectacle as the classic Enrico Venturi and Pedro Montanez put on a couple of weeks ago. Both Armstrong and the New Yorker are busy little fellows, each packing a knockout punch and a lot of speed.

They represent most of the featherweight division championship, although recent events have a couple of other lads up there in different territories.

California recognizes Armstrong; New York gives the nod to Belloise, contending his Los Angeles loss to the Californian was not at the legal championship limit of 15 rounds. In addition, there's young Jackie Wilson, who's stamped champ by the Pennsylvania commission, and the slugging little Petey Sarron, who rates at various way stations.

Originally Armstrong was to have met the Italian lightweight husky Aldo Spoldi, in tonight's 10-rounder. Spoldi turned up with an injured hand, however, and the Garden substituted Mike. Now Henry has to meet Mike tonight and tangle with Spoldi next Friday.

SPARTA ELEVEN STRENGTHENED FOR GAME WITH THE SHAMROCKS

By Dent McSkimming.

Going back to the game of Dec. 13 here, Chicago's great Bohemian soccer club, Sparta A. B. A., appears worthy of all the planning and scheming the Shamrocks devote to it in preparation for the western final cup match of Sunday.

In that game of three months ago, Sparta was "all over" the local champions for the first half hour, but wound up on the losing end of a 4-0 score. There was nothing to choose between the teams until big John Tomich, trying to catch Joe Strattman, accidentally kicked the ball into his own goal. Another of the Shamrock goals came from a penalty kick. Thus, only two of the four goals were untainted, both by Billy Gonsalves.

Sparta is certain to be a stronger team Sunday than it was on that day of three months ago. Recently, in a western semifinal, the Chicagoans scored six goals in beating Castle Shannon of Pittsburgh, three of them by Outside Left Jimmy Wolf. Jimmy Munro, veteran outside right, has returned to action after a layoff due to injury; Reggie Wright will be at center forward, and Bob Fidler and Baba Vicek will be the inside forwards. Sparta's backfield, a bit ponderous but very efficient, has undergone no change. Willie Sebek is the goaltender; Tom Scott and Laddy Mrnka the fullbacks; John Tomich, Jerry Nuders and Einar Pearson the halfbacks. Manager Charley Fencl is bringing four reserves: Coyle, Frazer and Rezek, forwards, and Burda, goaltender.

Expect to Play Better.

For several reasons, Manager Alec McNab expects his Shamrocks to raise the game a few notches against Sparta. First of all, the Chicago players are not so fast as the hustling St. Louis boys who made up the Town Criers of last Sunday. Given a little more time to get settled, the Shamrocks play better football. Next, the Shamrock players to a man feel that they have gotten past a terrific hurdle in beating the Town Criers, and their self confidence should be considerably improved. It is logical to suppose, too, that the St. Louis players will tighten their defense as a result of the enlightening incidents of last Sunday, when they barely escaped defeat.

While the western finalists, Shamrocks and Sparta, are playing their two-game series, Sunday and March 21, the East will settle its difficulties in two days, Saturday and Sunday of this week end. It is unofficially reported that the grand final, a two-game series, will open in New York and finish in either St. Louis or Chicago. Regardless of whether Brooklyn Hispano or New York Americans win, the eastern game will be played at New York.

Amateur Cup Finalists.

Western finalists in the National Amateur cup competition are Slavia-Bartunek of Cleveland and Castle Shannon of Pittsburgh. The Bartuneks came strong in the extra periods to defeat Pabsts of Milwaukee, 4 to 2, in their western semifinal.

Preston North End, surprise team of the English cup competition, is managed by Tommy Muirhead, who as manager and captain of the Boston Club in the American Soccer League, induced Alec McNab to quit Scottish football and come to America in 1923. Muirhead's team is in the semifinal round of the English cup race. He starred for years as left halfback for Glasgow Rangers.

LEADERS WIN MATCH IN TABLE TENNIS

The Browns, captained by Esther Guenther, retained their hold on first place in the women's Metropolitan table tennis league by defeating the Blues, 8 to 1. The Browns now own four victories and no defeats, followed by the Oranges with a 3—0 record.

Other results: Oranges 7, Whites 2; Red 5, Blacks 4; Green 5, Tans 4. The Purples and Pinks drew byes.

Hoc-Soc Results.

In the first round of play in the second annual city hoc-soc tournament at Neighborhood Association last night, Sarsfield defeated the Piegges, 5 to 3 and the Vinces shut out the Park Mice, 4 to 0. The Attics trimmed the Eighteenth Ward Democrats, 7 to 3, and Stix, Baer & Fuller won from the Oil Centers by the same score.

Julius Reeder Is Tanforan Leader

Former Fairmount Park Racing Secretary Named General Manager of Coast Track.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12. JULIUS G. REEDER, nationally-known racing official is the new general manager of Tanforan race track. Owner John W. Marchbank appointed him yesterday.

The Schotchman from Kentucky will act also as racing secretary and handicapper, a post he held here last season. He is rated as No. 1 handicapper and conditioner of races on the West Coast.

It was understood that Reeder would operate the track, which opens its 25-day spring meeting Saturday, under the policy established by Marchbank, but would have a free hand in making improvements and fixing purses. Reeder was racing secretary at Fairmount Park under the Matt Winn regime.

Trainer George Odom left Miami yesterday for Columbia, S. C., where he will take up a big stable of horses owned by Marshall Field and Robert L. Gerry. Odom did not have much luck in Florida this winter but believes he has several promising thoroughbreds at Columbia, including Field's three-year-olds, Sir Damion and Charing Cross.

Before leaving Florida, Odom secured second call on the services of Jockey Nick Wall. W. M. Ziegler Jr., has first call on the Boston veteran.

W. J. (Buddy) Hirsch's Columbiana, winner of the Widener Challenge Cup in record time for fillies, will not be seen very often on New York tracks this year. The 25-year-old trainer thought so little of his four-year-old filly a few months ago that he failed to name her for the important stakes at Belmont Park, Aqueduct, Jamaica and Empire City. He probably will enter her in several Saratoga stakes which close March 15, however.

SCRAP IRON PRICES DOUBLED IN A YEAR

The booming of the steel business in this country and heavy armament programs in England, Japan and Italy have caused prices of scrap iron and steel to double in the last year, a local dealer said today.

While this has caused junk dealers who travel up and down alleys in old wagons to intensify their searching of ashpits and bargainings with householders over old stoves, gratings, metal beds, tools and the like, only a small proportion of the scrap is gathered by this method. The great bulk of it comes from industrial left-overs, wrecking of buildings and fires in buildings, from dismantling of old railroad equipment and tearing up of rails, and from discarded automobiles.

Europe and Japan produce virtually no scrap iron and steel and rely on this country for their supply, the dealer said. Parts of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, where the St. Louis market used to buy much of its scrap are now exporting it via Houston or New Orleans, cutting down on the supply of this market.

Consumption of scrap iron and steel in the six large and 25 small steel plants in the St. Louis area has tripled in the past year, and now reaches 6000 tons a day, he said. Similar increases have taken place in larger steel centers, such as Pittsburgh and Chicago, he added.

Prices paid by large-scale dealers in this area now are: No. 1 heavy melting railroad steel scrap, $7.50 a gross ton; No. 2 heavy melting mixed steel scrap, $16.50; No. 1 machinery cast iron scrap, $15; agricultural and machinery cast iron scrap, $14.50. Prices paid by junk yards to small peddlers and junk collectors at the yards are: farm machinery, $10.50 to $11.50 a ton; industrial scrap, $11 to $12; cast iron, $11 to $12; stove iron, $8.50. These also are almost double a year ago.

Non-ferrous metal prices also have increased 40 to 60 per cent. Those paid by junk yards for 100 pounds were quoted yesterday as: Light brass, $4; heavy yellow brass, $6; red brass, $8; heavy copper wire, $9; light copper wire, $8; zinc, $2.50; lead, $4.50; tin foil, $34.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Faced with a pile-up in railroad yards of cars filled with scrap iron destined to Europe and the Far East, the New York Central Railroad today placed a "precautionary embargo" on shipments to New York and Boston. The railroad is willing to accept only under certain conditions cars loaded with scrap iron. Inability to find shipping on which to load the metal, with the result that cars were tied up in yards for days at a time, was said to have been responsible for the action.

HOMER MARTIN TO ADDRESS ST. LOUIS WORKERS TONIGHT

Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, is scheduled to address St. Louis members of the union at 8 o'clock tonight at the Opera House of the Municipal Auditorium.

Martin, coming by plane from Detroit, will preside at an initiation ceremony for local union members. Only members of the United Automobile Workers will be admitted.

Following the initiation, Martin will return to his Detroit headquarters, accompanied by Delmond Garst, secretary of Local Union 25, to attend a conference on details of the General Motors strike settlement. Employes of the St. Louis Chevrolet-Fisher Body plant went on a sit-down strike Wednesday afternoon in protest against the United Chevrolet Workers' Guild, described by Garst as a company union. The strike was settled when the management agreed to prohibit solicitation of guild memberships during working hours.

Next week Garst will join other members of the union executive board in a meeting at Cleveland, O.

Attorney Alleges Employes Have Been Beaten by Strikers and Their Sympathizers.

Suit for an injunction to prevent picketing or any interference with operations of the National Underwear Corporation, 239 South Boyle avenue, where employes have been on strike since Feb. 2, was filed today in Circuit Court. Judge Charles the petition to be held next Tuesday.

The petition, prepared by Victor Packman, attorney for the company, alleges employes have been beaten by strikers and their sympathizers, and that other acts of violence have occurred.

The strikers were unorganized when they walked out, in protest against wage cuts, but the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, at their request, took charge of the strike, which has attracted unusual public attention. Wives of college professors, seminary students, and others with no organized labor connections have at times joined in the picket line.

Leo J. Rothbarth, president of the company, has said that it permanently discontinued manufacturing operations because of the strike and has refused to negotiate. The company's petition gave the number of its employes on the day the strike began as 130, but the strikers assert 225 are on strike.

Army Engineers' Head Tells Conference Such a Program Would 'Roughly Protect Valley for All Future Time.'

LOSS IN TWO YEARS PUT AT $700,000,000

He Asserts System of Reservoirs Is Not Sufficient but Should Be Supplemented With Dikes and Floodways.

The Ohio Valley can be protected from floods "roughly for all future time" if one and a half times as much money were spent on flood control as was lost in the valley in the last two disasters, Major-General E. M. Markham, chief of the United States Army Engineers, said in an address today before the flood control conference at Hotel Statler, called by the Mississippi Valley Association.

The short, fiery General, speaking in oratorical fashion, estimated floods in the Ohio Valley this year and last cost $700,000,000. "It looks to me like a marvelous business investment for the United States, with or without local help, to spend one and a half times that sum and avoid, perhaps for all time, future disasters in that valley," he said.

He warned the 200 engineers, members of levee boards and flood experts to avoid accepting erroneous information about the recent flood. "The Army Engineers have spent $12,000,000 studying 200 major streams in the last seven years," he continued. "If we can't formulate a plan to avoid future floods after the expenditure of such a sum, where in the name of God can you go to get reliable information?"

The army engineers insist that reservoirs alone cannot protect the Mississippi Valley, he continued. Unless necessary adjunct, such as dikes and floodways, are used, he said, both the Mississippi and Ohio valleys will not be fully protected.

For comparison in judging the volume of the recent Ohio River flood, Gen. Markham suggested Niagara Falls. Water in the Ohio flowed 2¼ million feet per second, or "20 times all the water you see flowing over Niagara Falls," he explained.

88 Reservoirs on Ohio Proposed.

Within two weeks the Army Engineers, Gen. Markham announced will present to Congress a plan that calls for construction of 88 reservoirs in the Ohio Valley, costing about $602,000,000, and dikes and floodwalls costing an additional $190,000,000.

That system of reservoirs, he asserted, will lower flood crests 10 feet at Pittsburgh, five feet at Cincinnati, two feet at Evansville, two at Paducah, Ky., and two at Cairo, Ill. "That shows you can't be protected merely by a system of reservoirs," he added.

Since 1927, $200,000,000 has been spent on flood control on the Mississippi from Cairo to New Orleans, he continued. "Without that expenditure, the recent flood would have caused a loss in the lower Mississippi of $400,000,000," he asserted. "Thus in one flood we recovered our capital and made a profit of $200,000,000."

States and the Cost.

If expenses of flood work could be equitably balanced, States would share the cost with the Federal Government, Gen. Markham continued. "But we cannot overcome the mechanical difficulties brought in when selfish state representatives refuse to agree on how much each state should pay," he asserted.

Reforestation has accomplished little or nothing toward cutting down the force of any big flood, Gen. Markham declared. A forest may withhold .14 of an inch to possibly half an inch of water, he added.

"I know of no single field for a better use of the Government dollar than the building of flood control structures, he said. "We have planned and prepared to advance with great speed, applying Federal funds sanely.

Madrid to Protest to League On Italian Soldiers in Spain

Cabinet, Meeting at Valencia, Also Votes to Make Representations to Neutrality Committee.

By the Associated Press.

VALENCIA, Spain, March 12.—The Spanish Government Cabinet voted last night to protest to the International Neutrality Committee and the League of Nations against "the presence of various regular Italian divisions on the Guadalajara front."

The protest, it was decided, will charge that the presence of the Italians is a grave violation of the European non-intervention accord. Official sources said many of the divisions were the same as those which fought in Ethiopia and were equipped with heavy artillery.

Gen. Jose Miaja, Government commander on the Madrid front, charged yesterday that 30,000 Italian soldiers were driving toward Madrid with the Spanish insurgent army in Guadalajara, and accused Italy of waging an "undeclared war" on Spain.

Eleven prisoners of war, all said to have been captured on the Madrid front, were brought here as evidence that Italian and German troops were forced to fight for the insurgents. They included three Italians, two Germans, a French Moroccan and five Spaniards.

The Italians said they got leave after serving with the Italian armies in Ethiopia but were recalled to service, received new uniforms and were sent to Spain without knowing their destination.

The Government's characterization of the conflict as "international" was said to have been strengthened further by the reported declaration of an Italian prisoner, identified as Major Luciano Antonio de Inino, that the Italian Government was planning to send even more "regular Italian troops" to Spain.

The Major, said to be the chief of an Italian machine gun unit in Guadalajara, was one of three officers and 42 men who became lost and were trapped by Government militiamen.

He was quoted as telling Gen. Miaja's staff that "Italy's support of Fascism in Spain is in line with the Italian policy to establish a league of Fascist countries."

A defense junta statement said disclosures by the prisoners on the composition of the insurgent forces in Guadalajara "fully prove Italy's participation in this war." One of the four divisions, the statement added, is from the regular Italian army, the other three being made up of Blackshirt militia.

OFFICERS SELECTED FOR SPANISH BLOCKADE

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 12.—Two Dutch naval officers and a Danish Colonel were named today to direct the International Non-Intervention Committee's blockade against foreign volunteers and munitions shipments into Spain.

Admiral M. H. Van Dulm, former commander of the Dutch fleet in the East Indies, was placed in charge of the entire neutrality project. Admiral J. S. C. Oliver, former Dutch squadron commander, was selected to direct the naval patrol, and Col. Christian Lunn, a Dane, to supervise the work of frontier agents along the French-Spanish border.

The naval patrol, in which British, French, German and Italian warships will participate, will begin tomorrow. The land blockade is not expected to start until about the end of March.

Admiral Van Dulm will also be a member of the administrative board, a division of the whole committee. Final plans for the cordon of men and warships around the Spanish civil war were completed at a committee session which lasted only 30 minutes.

Work of the land patrol will be delayed because of the necessity of recruiting 550 committee agents.

Of the 550 committee agents, 130 will patrol the frontier along the Pyrenees Mountains; five will be stationed at Gibraltar, and the rest will board ships bound for Spain at control ports to watch the unloading of cargoes.

A vanguard of 130 British observers already is in Lisbon checking up on Portugal's compliance with the new agreement but the members will not take over their posts until March 20.

Germany to Put Fishing Vessels in Spanish Patrol.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 12.—Germany recruited a fleet of fishing steamers and trawlers today to reinforce the Reich's warships which will participate in the international neutrality patrol of Spain.

The auxiliary ships, it was reliably disclosed, will be put under navy command effective Sunday.

The battleships Deutschland and Graf Spee and the cruisers Leipzig and Koeln will be joined in Spanish waters shortly by the battleship Admiral Scheer.

FRANKED GOVERNMENT MAIL UP 250 PER CENT SINCE 1930

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Senator Hayden (Dem.), Arizona, produced postal statistics yesterday to show that the amount of mail sent free by Government agencies increased nearly 250 per cent between 1930 and 1936.

Hayden said part of the increase might have been justified but he criticised distribution of what he called "needless publicity matter." He added, however, that an increase in the number and scope of Government agencies during recent years made necessary a somewhat greater use of the mail privilege.

Hayden, a member of a subcommittee considering the Postoffice appropriations bill, said testimony before the committee showed an increase from $9,347,505 in 1930 to $32,236,269 in 1936 in the amount of free postage used by departments. He said, however, the actual cost of handling congressional franked mail is about $677,000 a year.

COMMITTEE PROPOSES PAROLE BOARD CHANGE

Missouri Home Group Suggests Over-Crowding in Prisons Be Eliminated.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 12.—The House Committee on Penitentiary and Reform Schools reported to the House yesterday on the work of a subcommittee which had been instructed to investigate the parole systems of State penal institutions, but the recommendations did not cover the broad field of inquiry.

In voluntary and unofficial cooperation with representatives of the Senate Committee on Penitentiaries, the subcommittee, headed by Representative Suggett L. Edwards of Mexico, held a series of hearings during the last month, with officials of the State Penal Board as witnesses.

The committee did not limit its report to recommendations on parole procedures, but on that subject it suggested that the State Parole Board, now composed of the three Penal Commissioners, be changed to consist of two citizens appointed by the Governor and serving without pay and a full-time executive to be named by them.

"Necessary machinery to make possible the wise selection of prisoners who should be paroled" is lacking under the present system, the report said, suggesting that additional parole officers be employed.

The report declared that "the man without friends, relations and money is at a disadvantage" in obtaining a parole. No specific reference was made to the generally known fact that political influence is frequently a factor in the granting of paroles.

Elimination of a statutory provision that a prisoner in the intermediate reformatory serve seven-twelfths of his sentence before becoming eligible for parole was suggested.

Other recommendations were that the institutions for juvenile delinquents be placed under an agency separate from the Penal Board, that the size of the board be increased from three to five members, and that over-crowding in the prisons be remedied.

GERMANY CONTROLS HOSPITAL DIETS IN CONSERVATION MOVE

(Copyright, 1937.)

BERLIN, March 12.—Coffee, black tea, fresh eggs and imported fruits such as oranges and apples may be given to patients in hospitals only by special order of doctors, according to the Magazine for National Nutrition.

The article including this statement outlined the principles which will guide hospitals in feeding their patients under the new German four-year plan for self-sufficiency, which calls for drastic reduction in foreign imports and food saving.

The magazine enjoined hospitals to use more fish and more frozen and canned meats, but to avoid fried foodstuffs "such as pancakes, omelets and chops, which should be crossed off the hospital menu because they require too much fat." German fried potatoes also are taboo, because of the amount of fat needed. They must be replaced by boiled potatoes.

Colonel-General Wilhelm Goering signed an order today, forbidding paperhangers from making their paste from flour of wheat, rye, maize or potatoes. He said cellulose pastes were available.

CUMMINGS REFUSES CLEMENCY FOR FORMER CONGRESSMAN

John H. Hoeppel and Son Were Convicted of Conspiring to Sell West Point Appointment.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Attorney-General Cummings refused today to recommend clemency for John H. Hoeppel, former California Congressman, serving a prison term for conspiring to sell a West Point appointment.

Hoeppel and his son, Charles, are serving one year sentences at the District of Columbia workhouse at Occoquan, Va. Both have served three months of their sentences and will be eligible for parole March 27.

Cummings did not divulge reasons advanced by Hoeppel for special consideration and immediate relief, saying only that he was refusing the petition without sending it to the White House. Under the law the Attorney-General can pass judgment upon certain requests for executive clemency without notifying the President.

Hoeppel's request was accompanied by a petition signed by 17 members of Congress and was submitted to the Justice Department by Representative McGroarty (Dem.), California, and delegate Dimond (Dem.), Alaska.

Hoeppel and his son were convicted in December, 1935, of conspiracy to sell an appointment to the military academy to James W. Ives of Baltimore, Md., for $1000.

ITALY PROMISES TO PROTECT BELGIUM AGAINST AGGRESSION

Notifies Brussels Government It Does Not Require Reciprocal Pledge.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, March 12.—Italy informed Belgium yesterday it would guarantee Belgium against aggression by any other nation without requiring the Brussels Government to give a similar guarantee to Rome.

Under the 1925 Locarno treaty, France and Germany agreed to commit no aggression in Belgium and Great Britain and Italy gave assurances they would see that the accord was enforced. Germany, in remilitarizing the Rhineland last March, denounced the Locarno Pact. Britain and France made new declarations that they would maintain Belgium's independence.

German Foreign Office sources indicated in Berlin yesterday that the Reich would make no reservations concerning a new Western European peace agreement if "one-sided" military alliances are ended. In that case, they said, Reichsfuehrer Hitler would be willing to guarantee the independence of Belgium, Switzerland and the Netherlands.

COURT BILL SAVED IN MISSOURI HOUSE AMID WILD SCENE

Effect of Proceedings Is to Keep Proposal Alive for Action at More Favorable Time.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 12.—An attempt of Majority Floor Leader Roy Hamlin of Hannibal to bring up for perfection his bill which would strip the State Supreme Court of its power to disbar lawyers, evoked a wild scene in the House today, and defeat of the measure was prevented only by a series of maneuvers of Dick B. Dale, Speaker pro tem, who was presiding.

After numerous members of the House spoke heatedly against the measure, Representative R. J. Murray of Morgan County, moved that the bill be tabled. If such a motion had carried, the bill could have only been considered again on a two-thirds vote.

After Murray had put his motion, several other members were on their feet to second the motion, but Speaker Dale recognized Hamlin, who said he wanted the floor under personal privilege. While Hamlin was speaking, Minority Floor Leader Harry Clymer, who had strongly opposed the bill, said he wanted to be fair and asked Murray to withdraw his motion. Murray complied with his request and Hamlin, taking advantage of the situation, shrewdly asked that the bill be placed back on the informal calendar and thereby saved the bill from defeat.

Speaker's Tactics Questioned.

Members of the House who had attempted to second Murray's motion jumped up and heatedly charged that they should have been recognized by Dale before Hamlin. Representative Francis Smith of St. Joseph, who also opposed the bill, questioned the tactics of Dale. He said it was his understanding that under the rules, the Speaker should have immediately asked for a second when Murray made his motion. Dale said the member had requested recognition to make the second, and that Hamlin was the first to rise for recognition.

The effect of the proceeding was to save Hamlin's bill for consideration by a more favorable House at a later date. There were less than 80 members present in the House today, and it was obvious the measure would have been defeated.

By gaining the delay, Hamlin will benefit by the presence later of many members known to favor the bill.

After the fight over the procedure had subsided, Representative V. E. Phillips, Kansas City lawyer, asked that Speaker Dale be given a vote of confidence by the House for his handling of the matter. A few members applauded.

The Expressed Purpose.

The expressed purpose of Hamlin's bill is to upset the decision of the Supreme Court that it possessed the inherent power to regulate and discipline the Bar, and to render ineffective the work of the State Bar Committees, which were appointed by the Supreme Court to enforce its regulations and institute disbarment proceedings.

The bill would establish the right to practice law in Missouri as a property right, which could not be taken without "due process of law." It provides disbarment trials should be by juries, and charges of unethical practices against attorneys could be instituted only by the prosecuting attorney in the county in which the alleged offense occurs.

Representative Smith, a young attorney, in speaking in opposition to the bill, said Hamlin's measure was a "thoroughly bad measure, which would strip the Supreme Court of its power to regulate the bar, and was designed to protect those attorneys who are now in fear of disbarment."

"When this bill was up before the Judiciary Committee," he said, "a certain attorney who has represented numerous lawyers in disbarment cases, engaged in a vigorous tirade against the Supreme Court and its power to disbar unethical attorneys.

"For many years Missouri has been hounded by unscrupulous and unethical conduct, and when noth-

PAID HUGH JOHNSON FOR ADVICE ON STRIKE

R. C. A., as Well as John L. Lewis, Thought $40,000 Moderate, General Says.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former administrator of N R A, was paid $40,000 for his services as a consultant of the Radio Corporation of America during a strike of R. C. A. employes at Camden, N. J., last year, officers of the corporation disclosed yesterday at the Senate Civil Liberties Committee hearing.

Chairman La Follette of the committee then read a letter Johnson had written to the committee, saying that the corporation had "expressed gratification at the moderation" of his fee.

"Among others who expressed both satisfaction with the conduct of the case and an opinion that in view of the saving to both employes and the company the fee was not large enough was Mr. John L. Lewis," Johnson wrote.

Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, assisted in strike negotiations.

Officers of the RCA Manufacturing Co. of Camden, a subsidiary, testified a letter from Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey was responsible for their "bad judgment" in hiring a detective agency to fight a strike.

FEY-STARHEMBERG DUEL OFF

Challenger Says Court of Honor Has Vindicated Him.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, March 12.—Maj. Emil Fey, former Vice-Chancellor, said last night he had obtained full vindication in the Austrian officers' court of honor in a dispute with Prince Ernst von Starhemberg.

The Prince—head of the Fascist Heimwehr organization, a private army which has been declared illegal—was abroad, but his friends said he had informed his seconds he was not interested in the court's ruling and demanded that a duel be fought. Fey challenged Von Starhemberg to a duel last October after the Prince declared that Fey's conduct at the time of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss' assassination was "never satisfactorily explained." Fey abandoned the duel challenge because, hesaid, his seconds had been unable to present themselves to "responsible representatives" of Von Starhemberg. Then he appealed to the court of honor.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Lists Catholics in Favor of the Child Labor Amendment.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AS a Catholic and the mother of six children, all graduates of Catholic colleges, I feel I have a right to speak as a member of the Catholic church. I resent the misrepresentation given the church by some of its leaders in regard to the Federal child labor amendment.

The church fears interference with religious education, but in no court case has the word "labor" ever been held to have any relation whatever to education.

The basis of all opposition to the child labor amendment is a desire for profit, and I'd be ashamed to say that an effort to rescue children from factories would have anything to do with religious education. The effort to abolish child labor aimed at by the amendment is non-partisan and non-sectarian.

Among the Catholic clergy, educators and humanitarians who have advocated this amendment are Mgr. J. W. Keyes of Kansas City; Mgr. John A. Ryan, great theologian and economist; the Rev. J. W. R. Maguire, dean, department of sociology, St. Viator College, Bourbonnais, Ill.; the Rev. John M. Cooper, educator and anthropologist of the Catholic University; the Rev. Francis V. Corcoran of New Orleans, La.; Jerome G. Kerwin, associate professor of political science, University of Chicago; John A. Lapp, former professor of sociology and head of department of social science, Marquette University; John J. Mahoney, professor of education, Boston University; David A. McCabe, professor of economics, Princeton University; the Rev. R. A. McGowan, assistant director, department of social action, National Catholic Welfare Conference, Washington, D. C.; John T. Donahue, Vocational High School, Syracuse, N. Y.; Carlton J. H. Hayes, professor of history, Columbia University.

And last of all, we should not forget that Senator Thomas J. Walsh, who was one of the greatest Catholic laymen, helped to write the amendment and used his great influence in its support.

Democracy and the Supreme Court.

THERE can be no such thing as real democracy in America as long as the one almost completely undemocratic branch of our much-heralded "check and balance" system continues only to "check" the acts of those other two branches which are responsible to the vote of the people.

American democracy will only be achieved by intelligent voting for representatives. If the acts of a President and Congress become incompatible with the wishes of the people, these facts face the judgment of these people every two years in their vote. There being no such check by the people on the Supreme Court, is it right that its wishes should thwart those of the electorate as expressed by vote for the representatives?

Putting Us Right on the Dutch Cocktail.

SAY, you, lay off the Gay Nineties and quit your editorial aspersions on the golden age of drinking. A Dutch cocktail was not made to weaken beer. It was a way to cut the soda and make the drink a soft, pleasant one. The beer content was just a tablespoonful in a bottle of plain, white soda. It could be considered a chaser. Something similar in those days was to put a little kuemmel in weiss beer, making it more palatable.

BERLINER WEISS.

Would Tax Handbooks.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WHY do our legislators spend their time trying to reduce the penalty of conducting illegal handbooks? Why not make a law to legalize these places and tax them instead of recommending higher taxes on the necessities of life? It is not fair for a certain business to run without paying its share of taxes.

Every St. Louisan with eyesight knows that handbooks are almost as numerous as saloons, and we all know saloons pay their share of taxes.

Why can't we legalize lotteries and gambling, and make them bear the burden by taxation, instead of requiring everyone to pay a "Pendergast token" with each purchase? SALEM GUARD.

Frederick F. Simms.

WHITE men and women, some of them from the deep South, wept last Saturday at the funeral of a St. Louis Negro. Not as they and their ancestors, even before the Civil War, had cried at the passing of gentle Negroes, who had won their affections. This was different. They wept because Frederick F. Simms had been their beloved and honored colleague. They had served on committees with him and had known no difference between him and them, save that they had thought him more able and just and wise.

Those who gathered last Saturday to do him honor were not Negroes and whites, but all comrades of Frederick F. Simms, and the place was not a Negro church, but a hallowed spot wherein their brother was in our midst for the last time. L. I. D.

QUESTIONS FOR MR. ROOSEVELT.

1. You tell the people at their firesides with alarm when you tell them you are trying to save democracy for America. What is the hidden danger to American democracy?

2. Exactly what kind of "crisis" confronts the country which requires the extraordinary means you now propose to meet it?

3. What legislation do you contemplate which you fear the present Supreme Court will find to be unconstitutional?

4. You point out that 13 states—citing the smallest—could defeat a "clarifying amendment" to the Constitution: why this defeatist position when all the states except two were carried by you last November? And if 13 states did defeat it, would not that be their right under the Constitution, which you have twice, as President, sworn to uphold?

5. If time is now the essence of the country's problem and the bill to reorganize the judiciary must be passed immediately, why did you not recommend that reorganization in 1935, when, in your "horse-and-buggy" press conference, you, as a lawyer, said the court's unanimous decision killing N R A, the "heart of the New Deal," implied the doom of all the rest of it? Have you not wasted nearly two years?

6. You deny intending to pack the Supreme Court. If you do not pack it, what is to prevent continued decisions with which you will disagree? Will not division continue—even the majority-of-one division that you denounce?

7. If the majority of the court which you create should interpret the Constitution as the present court has done, will you then accept the verdict, or will you seek further to enlarge the court and name still another majority?

8. You urge the people to read and re-read the Constitution, and you say the court has been acting not as a judicial body but as a policy-making body. Where in the Constitution do you find authority for the President to act in a judicial capacity—to tell the court what its decisions should be?

9. How can you exalt democracy and denounce majority decisions of the Supreme Court? Do you know of any way in which democracy can function except by majority rule?

OUT-ELSIEING ELSIE.

Sooner or later, Mrs. Roosevelt's scarlet past was sure to be revealed, and now the First Lady herself confesses that, as a little girl, she told some outrageous fibs. Also, under the mistaken impression that it was full of sugar and spice and everything nice, she took a small glass of bitter German beer. Mrs. Roosevelt is a repentant sinner. For, it seems, she told lies only because of fear and, when she found there was nothing to fear, she embarked on a long career of truth-telling. Then, she was so disillusioned by her first glass of beer that she has not cared for it since.

By comparison with Mrs. Roosevelt, little Elsie Dinsmore was just a hardened woman of the world.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE IN MISSOURI.

A most important task, if not the most important, now before the Missouri Legislature is the enactment of an unemployment insurance law which will enable the workers of this State to participate in the unemployment insurance benefits provided by the Federal Social Security Act.

Missouri belatedly takes up this assignment, which economists generally agree is a fundamental attack on unemployment. Three-quarters of the members of the Union have already adopted statutes providing for unemployment insurance in one form or another. Under these laws are approximately 20,000,000 workers. Only Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, North Dakota, Washington and Wyoming have also failed to act. Indeed, several of these other laggards are certain to have such laws in effect before Missouri.

The course of wisdom in Missouri, since this State has had no experience with earlier legislation, is to adopt the best statute which the administration and the legislative leaders can frame. We have the tragic inadequacy and misuse of the old-age assistance law to warn us against the enactment of another politically-contrived measure. What, on the basis of the experience of other states and the opinion of experts, should Missouri do? That is the question which every member of the Missouri Legislature should be asking himself. It is a question to which every member should be working out an answer.

One thing is certain: there should be no levying by the State on the pay envelope of the worker. The worker already pays 1 per cent toward the Federal fund under the law passed by Congress. To tax him further would be to lay him open to a double payment which would be grossly unfair. Industry passes its share of the cost to the consumer. If the State should place the burden on its workers as well as upon industry, the workers would pay first as workers and then again as consumers.

The State Social Security Commission, which reported to Gov. Park near the close of his administration, indorsed payments by industry alone, and a bill to that end has been introduced by Senator McReynolds, chairman of the commission, and Senator Rozier. The administration measure, announced by Gov. Stark two months ago, and sponsored by Representatives Phillips and Hamlin, at first placed a share of the burden on wages. Gov. Stark later changed his position, explaining that it had been found that the fund would be built up fast enough without contributions by employes.

Once there is agreement on this point, the Legislature must decide how the fund is to be handled. Shall we have the employer reserve system, like that in Wisconsin, the first state to provide unemployment insurance? Shall we have a modification of this form, but still retain the essential feature, namely, that each employer shall establish his own reserve, out of which he alone is obligated to pay benefits? Shall we adopt the pooled fund system, which joins the contributions of all employers in a common fund?

The hearings, at which are being heard such authorities as Paul H. Douglas of the University of Chicago and Paul A. Raushenbush, director of the Wisconsin system, must furnish the answers. Mrs. Chubb's letter, which we printed under the cartoon yesterday, is a contribution to this educational discussion.

In any case, the Missouri statute, while aiming to co-operate with the Federal act, should be designed to continue in operation even if the act of Congress should be held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. The Justices automatically sustained New York's law last November in their 4-to-4 division, with Justice Stone not participating. Had Justice Stone been sitting, state legislation would have been upheld by a majority decision, a prospect promised by the announcement of the court last Monday that it would hear the case involving Alabama's similar statute.

"T. J."

The name of Pendergast has finally been mentioned in the tangled skein of Kansas City's election methods. Not by way of personal appearance, understand. The Generalissimo remained in the deep seclusion of his Grand Headquarters, far from the scenes where mathematical miracles were contrived. But there came, as the story goes, a "mysterious dark man," with that air of high command, that blasing intangible of authority, in a word, a "Big Shot," before whom the lesser breed kotowed as they hurried to obey.

He was traveling incognito, under the pressure of a mighty mission. Time was precious. Minutes, aye, seconds, counted. The pencils of the subordinates fairly flew in the task of, let us say, perfecting the ballots, or, as a Frisco banker of long ago phrased it, "rearranging the statistics." The courier himself was not above the menial labor of assisting in the actual job of accountancy. Among some of the inexperienced judges and clerks there was curiosity as to the stranger's identity. All they learned was that he was from "T. J.'s office." That was enough.

For all we know, Pendergast has long been "T. J." to Kansas City. This is the first time, though, that he has thus been introduced in print. And this is the first time, too, that the people of Missouri have had a glimpse of the way affairs are conducted at the polling places. Heretofore, the people have been informed only as to the tall, majestic totals of election day in the Pendergast domain. Now, we are told, those totals were calculated and agreed upon before the polls were opened, and the duty of the attendants was simply to make performance tally exactly with predictions.

Thus, chapter by chapter, the story unrolls. Or, in the virtuosity of the Psalmist: "Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night sheweth knowledge."

NO CONCERN OF THE STATE.

The religious affiliation of an applicant for a State position is a personal matter and obviously should have no bearing one way or the other on the reception accorded the application. Yet the pink blanks which applicants have been told to fill out at the Governor's office ask specifically for a statement of religious affiliation, along with statements as to education, present employment, position applied for, training, experience and indorsements. Gov. Stark should see to it that this improper bid for information on a personal matter is removed. Church and state are separate in the United States, and Jew, Protestant and Catholic alike should be judged on qualifications and not as members of a particular religion when they seek places in the public service.

THE ORCHESTRA'S CAMPAIGN.

The array of exceptional artists announced by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra for its concerts of 1937-38 promises to make next season the most brilliant in years. Re-engagement of Vladimir Golschmann for his seventh season as conductor is another item of good news for St. Louis music lovers. And the proposal for a 16-concert spring series, at low admittance fees, means that the orchestra will reach an even larger public than that which it now delights.

It is under these favorable auguries that the Symphony Society has launched the campaign for its maintenance fund, set at $144,500 for the forthcoming season. No symphony orchestra, of course, is self-sustaining. To make box-office returns cover expenses would mean fees so high as to reduce attendance appreciably. The St. Louis orchestra earns 57 per cent of its budget, which is considered a high ratio. Friends of good music now are asked to subscribe the remaining 43 per cent in order to maintain the orchestra at its present high standard.

St. Louis for 57 years has supported its orchestra loyally, viewing it as a municipal asset of the first order. As a civic institution, rivaled by few in this country, it merits continued support. Contributors this year will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are helping the orchestra to bring high esthetic values to a greater audience than ever before.

TRAINING CAMP NEWS.

It is the spring training season. At Daytona Beach, Frankie Frisch and the Gas House Gang are getting the kinks out of their legs and sharpening up their eyes for the forthcoming season. At San Antonio, Rogers Hornsby and his bloody but unbowed Browns are tuning up for a place in first division. And at Washington, Manager Roosevelt of the New Deal squad is throwing pop bottles at the umpire because the old gentleman refuses to favor the home team.

WISE ACTION BY THE CIRCUIT ATTORNEY.

The decision of the Circuit Attorney's office to ask for reconsideration of the Shinkle case when the grand jury meets again next Tuesday will be supported by public opinion. There is, as Assistant Circuit Attorney McLaughlin points out, the possibility that an indictment would have been returned had all members of the grand jury been present. The guilt or innocence of Bradford M. Shinkle Jr., 24 years old, in the death of Emmett J. O'Brien, as the result of an automobile collision, is a matter for determination in a trial in which all the facts could be brought out. For the present, it is enough to say that the case of a young speeder whose automobile figures in a fatal crash after he has been arrested five times for violating traffic safety regulations should have the most searching scrutiny which the forces of the law can give it. The campaign for reducing the carnage on our streets is a waste of time unless we back it up with vigorous enforcement of equal justice to all offenders, whatever their place in society.

Is "John" to be the new White House spooksman?

MENACING.

What Kind of Government Do We Want?

President's plan, if adopted, would give him control of Supreme Court, and safeguards to liberty, in Lord Bryce's phrase, would be "gone like a morning mist," says Dean of Missouri U. Law School; issue is whether people wish to give such great power to executive; if his proposal wins, way will be opened to dictatorship.

By William E. Masterson, Dean, School of Law, University of Missouri.

"SUPPOSE a Congress and President bent on doing something which the Supreme Court deems contrary to the Constitution. They pass a statute. A case arises under it. The court, on the hearing of the case, unanimously declares the statute to be null, as being beyond the powers of Congress.

"Congress forthwith passes and the President signs another statute more than doubling the number of the Justices. The President appoints to the new justiceships men who are pledged to hold the former statute constitutional. The Senate confirms the appointments. Another case raising the validity of the disputed statute is brought up to the court. The new Justices outvote the old ones: the statute is held valid; the security provided for the protection of the Constitution is gone like a morning mist."

These words, uttered by Lord Bryce nearly half a century ago in "The American Commonwealth," are singularly prophetic of the President's request for authority to "reorganize" the Supreme Court. He asks power to appoint six new Judges to this court, increasing its membership to 15. Why?

The President wishes a court that will hold valid laws which he has sponsored. If he is given the power he now seeks, he will be in a position to create such a court; it cannot be denied that he will be able to place six men on the court who, he believes, will hold these laws constitutional, if they are not actually pledged to do so. I do not say he would do this, but he will be able to do so. If he should do so, he would then have control over the court.

Other cases raising the validity of the laws that have been held unconstitutional would be brought up to this court again and some of them at least would be held "constitutional." Party measures would, of course, have smooth sailing through Congress, and could be rubber-stamped by the majority of the "reorganized" judiciary. This new process of law making would, at least, become a possibility. No one can deny that. The real issue in this crisis, therefore, is, how far-reaching would be the effects of this new process of law-making? Would "the security provided for the protection of the Constitution" be "gone like a morning mist"?

Efforts to curb or "pack" the Supreme Court are not new, but they have usually had their birth in partisan politics. They have appeared in troubled times for the most part, when the court refused to warp its judgments to the wishes of those in political power. This very fact reveals the dangerous implications behind such efforts.

The President's demand is particularly dangerous at this time, since it is strategy that he would employ to overcome a deadlock between the New Deal and the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court. It is a plan to alter the personnel of that court as a means of meeting a situation that already exists. It is to enable the President to triumph over the court in the matter of interpreting the Constitution, the supreme law. It is a demand for power that would enable the executive to destroy the independence of that high tribunal as an institution and to subordinate its judgments to his will. Do the American people wish to place him in a position to achieve this triumph? That is the issue.

Should this triumph over the court be accomplished, we would no longer have resort to an unbiased, non-partisan judicial interpretation of laws of Congress in the light of the Constitution. The system of checks and balances that has been the genius of our Government would be destroyed. Many laws embodying the philosophy of a political party that have been declared unconstitutional would be confirmed by enlarging the personnel of the court rather than by a mandate of the people through the orderly processes of constitutional amendment.

This is another way of saying that the political faith of the party temporarily in power would become the Constitution for the time being; its creed would be the supreme law of the land. The Constitution would virtually be annulled. The security provided for its proctection would indeed "be gone like a morning mist." A new form of government would be upon us.

It boils down to whether the party in power that is advocating a political or economic theory is to be given uncontrolled power over the liberties, rights and fortunes of the individual, or whether this power is to remain subject to the check of a supreme law which the people themselves set up, and which they alone can alter. The people should decide so immense an issue, and not the executive or Congress.

Another practical danger lurks in the plan. Since the party in power is largely under the domination of a leader, that leader would be a potential dictator. He would have both Congress and the Supreme Court under his control. Clothed with such power, he might go too far. Will a liberty-loving people leave open a door through which autocracy might enter? That is the issue.

It is now being proposed as an alternative to the President's plan that a larger vote of the court than a bare majority, say a vote of 7 to 2 or 6 to 3, be required to nullify an act of Congress. This plan would in effect permit the minority to rule; it would destroy the democratic character of the court. Moreover, the Supreme Court is a permanent institution, and over a period of years, a minority of its Judges is more likely to be in error than the majority.

It is said, however, that frequently the majority in close decisions misinterpret the law, or are influenced by their political and economic views, and that constitutional laws are thus nullified by the majority; and this proposed requirement is proffered as a remedy for this evil. This argument proves too much. If a vote of 7 to 2, for example, were required, and if any three Judges should vote to sustain the law, the law would be "constitutional," even though the six other Judges should take the contrary view.

This would mean that only three Judges who might favor a measure, because they misinterpret the law or because they are influenced by their personal views, could prevent the court from holding it void, even though it might be clearly unconstitutional. Thus, from a long-range point of view, the danger sought to be avoided by this requirement would be proportionately increased.

Those who charge that the private political and economic views of the so-called "conservative" Judges have in recent years warped the decisions of the Supreme Court might ask themselves these questions: How can we account for the fact that in four decisions, the nine men stood together, while in two other decisions all the so-called "liberals" except one voted against the administration with the so-called "conservatives"? Why did all the "liberals" vote with the "conservatives" for an administration measure in one case? Why did at least one "liberal" vote with the "conservatives" in two other cases?

So far as 5-to-4 decisions are concerned, only two measures (the Municipal Bankruptcy and Railway Pension acts, and these were not of fundamental importance in the New Deal program) were held unconstitutional by this narrow margin. On the other hand, one law (the Ashurst-Sumners Act) was upheld by a unanimous court and another (a part of the Gold Clause Act) by a 5-to-4 decision. Thus, not one law that the administration considered vital has been voided by a 5-to-4 decision, while the only such decision of especial concern to it was in the administration's favor. Why, then, this sudden outburst against 5-to-4 decisions?

The fact is, the recent attack upon the Supreme Court is aimed at all decisions—even the unanimous ones—and, therefore, at the court itself. It is fundamentally the subtle expression of resentment against its existence as an independent branch of our Government.

It is helpful to examine the record of the Supreme Court as a whole. During its 130-year existence, only some 77 acts of Congress have been held unconstitutional; some 55 of its decisions were rendered by a unanimous court or by majorities of 6 to 3 or larger, while only in about 11 cases has there been a division of 5 to 4.

Our national judiciary may have made mistakes. Have Presidents? Have Congresses? We must view its record as a whole; and, so viewed, as an institution it has won the affection and confidence of the American people and the respect of the English-speaking world.

Men on the bench differ in their views as do men who labor in the other sciences. This is to be expected. It must be tolerated. Their differences are traceable to different but honest interpretations of the law. To pack the Supreme Court in order to prevent this disagreement and to insure support for future or revived invalidated measures as a means of circumventing the Constitution would be the rankest demagoguery.

A Benefit of War

From the Pittsburgh Press.

IN a recent interview abroad, Viscount Astor, husband of American-born Lady Astor, M. P., cited an interesting fact.

Under auspices of the League of Nations, a group of nutrition experts has been endeavoring to get countries to devote more care to the important matter of proper food for their young.

"In some countries where we cannot get interest in nutrition on the ground of child welfare," maintains Lord Astor, "we find it aroused by the need for stronger recruits for the army."

While this seems too strongly reminiscent of fattening the kine for the market, preparedness for war apparently does serve at least one good purpose. What an ideal state of things it would be, now, if this trend toward proper child care would gather momentum and become a permanent feature of our civilization, and war could be outlawed!

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Concerning the Meaning of a Word

IN the year 1933, the leader of National Socialist Germany introduced a new word into the language of revolution, a word as descriptive of one revolutionary technique as are other words, such as "Soviet" and "liquidation," of another. The German word was "gleichschaltung."

Gleichschaltung means: to direct everything into the same channel; to switch into line; to govern according to a common philosophy, in the direction of a uniform policy. It was the formula whereby Hitler, upon coming into power, transformed a manifold and democratic state into a totalitarian and authoritative state.

He did not abolish parliament, but, by a series of measures theoretically possible inside the Constitution to which he swore allegiance, he turned it into a mere instrument for validating his decrees. He did not liquidate the various associations of employers; he merely brought them into line with policy —as a condition of their continued existence.

He hardly disturbed the civil service in many branches of government. He merely changed its spirit. He did not destroy the church. He merely suggested a new interpretation of Christianity.

He did destroy the trade unions—but not the principle of collective bargaining. And for that he set up new organizations of workers in the Workers' Front, under the direction and control of the Government. He did not abolish the courts—he merely packed them, at the top, and laid down the principles upon which they were to judge the law.

In spite of a profound revolution which changed the entire structure and aim of German life, and which continues to affect the life of every individual German citizen, he hardly changed an existing institution; he merely "switched them into line."

President Roosevelt proposes to use exactly this technique in regard to the Supreme Court, and with exactly the same justification —"the will of the people."

Hitler, when he came into power with an overwhelming demonstration of popular following, announced that he had a mandate from the people to accomplish certain ends. These could not be achieved, he argued, without authoritative leadership and unity. This unity could be brought about by the process of gleichschaltung. And actually, with a great show of legality, he did switch everybody into line except a few religious people, Catholic and Protestants, who insisted on obeying certain imperatives which they believed were above the state.

Now, I am not suggesting for an instant that what President Roosevelt is trying to do is a sinister plot to establish a dictatorship on the German model. That, patently, would be nonsense. But I am trying to show that those who say that these proposals are essentially "conservative" are shooting far of the mark.

If a President with a huge popular following, the head of a party with an overwhelming majority in Congress, the unquestioned leader, therefore, of both the executive and administrative branches of government, wanted to establish a personal dictatorship, and do it "legally," this would be exactly the way he would proceed. He would see to it that the one last governmental body which he could not control was "brought into line."

When Sinclair Lewis wrote "It Can't Happen Here," describing the rise to power of the mythical Berzilius Windrip, the first thing he had Windrip do was to send the Supreme Court home. But had Mr. Lewis followed more closely the modern technique of the coup d'etat, he would have had Windrip keep the Supreme Court and fill it with his henchmen, in order to create the show of legality.

The advocates of the President's proposals describe this kind of argument as "hysterical." On the air the other night, Harry Hopkins asserted that the real guard against dictatorship lies in the democratic instrument of parliament; in Congress. Mr. Hopkins should study a little more closely the history of the last 20 years. I recommend to him a volume on the technique of modern revolution by the Italian, Malaparte, who quite coldly describes exactly how modern European states have been captured.

The modern technique of the coup d'etat, as illustrated by Pilsudski, Mussolini and Hitler, is a formula for capturing the democratic state by its own instruments, aided and abetted by the insurrectional action of bodies of workers, or party adherents.

Ever since Napoleon and the eighteenth Brumaire, the date of his coup, the tactic has been to use Parliament as the best ground on which "to combine the use of violence with respect for law." Legislative power, being favorable to the game of compromise and intrigue, assists the modern dictator to graft revolutionary despotism upon the constitutional order.

"One of the gravest dangers which confronts the modern state," says Malaparte, "is the vulnerability of parliaments. . . . For a Bonapartist coup d'etat, the guarantee of legality is a reform of the Constitution which limits public rights."

All parliaments, without exception, are vulnerable.

"Parliamentary democracies make the mistake of placing too much faith in the triumphs of liberty, whereas nothing is more fragile than the modern state," says Malaparte. "It is a dangerous illusion to believe that Parliament is the best defense of the state against a Bonapartist venture, and that liberty can be protected by liberty itself. This is what the deputies of the Spanish Cortes and the Polish Diet believed before the coups d'etat of Primo and Pilsudski."

And, also, it is a great mistake to think that these modern dictatorships are inevitably impelled by the reactionaries. Pilsudski, who established in Poland a military dictatorship, did it with the collaboration of the Socialist party and the trade unions, with the Marshal of the Diet as his ally in Parliament, and with the general strike to help him. In contrast, Mussolini's coup d'etat became possible only when he had the collaboration of the highest symbol of constitutionality and legitimacy in the state—the King. And Hitler would have had a hard time without the help of the same symbol, incorporated in Hindenburg.

Moreover, the whole procedure by which Hitler captured the German republic had already been started in motion, a year before he came into power, by Chancellor Bruening. Bruening was the least dictatorial of Chancellors, modest, self-effacing and utterly without those flamboyant qualities of personal leadership which characterize the modern popular "leader." But Bruening faced a situation very like one which we may have in this country in four years' time, if we are not careful, and if we should swim into another depression with a still heavily unbalanced budget.

Bruening was forced to retrenchment in the middle of a crisis. To pass a deflationary budget through a popular Parliament is always difficult, and therefore Bruening resorted to a paragraph of the Constitution under which powers could be vested in the President, to govern by decree, in a moment of national emergency. What Bruening did was legal and constitutional, although he stretched the constitutional paragraph out of meaning. For it had been written with the emergency of war in mind, not of a budgetary crisis.

He was not a dictator, and he intended to suspend the use of the paragraph when the crisis was over. But from that day to this, Germany has never been governed otherwise than by decree! Hitler, succeeding Bruening, found the perfect instrument for the establishing of complete dictatorship already at hand and in use. He merely needed to go on using Hindenburg—the court of final authority—as the stooge for his edicts.

If, then, this column urges over and over again the most scrupulous observance of the procedures of constitutional government, it is with the history of the last 20 years, and with the recent fate of European republics in mind.

As the President said in his acceptance speech in Philadelphia last June: "This generation of Americans has a rendezvous with destiny." But this generation of Americans had better not make any blind dates.

3600 AT LAST STUDENT SYMPHONY CONCERT

More than 3600 boys and girls who have learned to appreciate good music through attendance at the student concerts of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra filled every seat in the Municipal Auditorium opera house at the fifth and final concert of the series yesterday afternoon.

Although they applauded everyone from Conductor Vladimir Golschmann to the men who moved the piano, they reserved most of their enthusiam for 17-year-old Jean Browning, a dark-haired girl in a rose-colored dress, who was the piano soloist.

After playing a movement from Beethoven's third concerto, she was called back twice by the audience, received a large basket of flowers on the stage, played an encore, was called back for three more bows and then played another encore before her hearers were finally satisfied.

From 50 Schools.

A full hour before the concert began, children from some 50 schools within a 30-mile radius of St. Louis began arriving by street car, bus and private automobile. It was not uncommon to see a woman drive up in a coupe with four children in the rumble seat and three more crowded beside her in front.

There were little girls with long hair hanging over their shoulders, boys from military schools in uniforms with uncomfortably tight collars, school safety patrolmen with authoritative badges, high school girls wearing ankle socks and perky hats pushed far back on their heads and studious girls with glasses, carrying piles of books.

Only a handful took their seats early. The rest ran up and down stairs calling to friends, and inspected carefully all the posters, notebooks and modeling entered in the contest conducted by the student concert committee of the Symphony Society.

When 3 o'clock came and it was possible to delay no longer, they trooped in. Conductor Golschmann was greeted with a burst of applause, not the restrained handclapping from sedate Saturday night audiences, but the free, flowing type continuing until he raised his baton.

"Pomp and Circumstance."

The program opened with the stirring march, "Pomp and Circumstance," always a favorite with youthful audiences and with high school orchestras. It was possible to look in any direction and see half a dozen ardent listeners keeping time to the music by drumming on arm rests. Some, even less inhibited, helped the conductor lead the orchestra by waving their arms in the approved fashion.

One small girl in an aisle seat dropped her hat but was entirely unaware of it until an usher handed it to her. An urbane high school girl turned around to stare pointedly at a boy whose shoe was resting against her sleeve. He quickly put both feet on the floor.

Following "Pomp and Circumstance," the orchestra played selections from the "Peer Gynt" suite, an Indian war dance and the third movement from Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique" symphony. The Indian war dance, with emphasis on the tom-tom, brought most applause.

Next came a regular feature of each student concert, a demonstration of various instruments used in the orchestra. This time the percussion instruments were exhibited and played briefly by William Albers and William Ehrlich. Elmer Gesner, librarian, described the "terrific smash" made by the cymbals and Albers proved that he was not exaggerating. The audience found it highly amusing. Other instruments described and played were the bass drum, triangle, tambourine, castanets, kettle drums, chimes, bells and xylophone.

Conductor Golschmann then introduced Mrs. Oliver K. Bovard, chairman of the women's committee of the Symphony Society, who announced the winners of the project contests, designed to stimulate interest in music. Villa Duchesne won first with its notebooks, Adams Avenue School of Kirkwood won the poster contest and Adams and Goodall School of Webster Groves tied in the modeling and carving competition.

"We are very proud there are no vacant seats in this auditorium," the chairman said, whereupon most of her hearers looked about them to make certain such was the case. She was right. Capacity audiences attended most of the other four concerts this season, bringing the total attendance for the year to 17,500 children.

Virtually all of the children attended the entire series. They paid $2 for season tickets downstairs and $1.25 for upstairs seats. Single admissions, rarely sold, were 50 cents on the main floor and 30 cents upstairs.

15th Year of Concerts.

This is the fifteenth year student concerts have been offered. Starting in 1921 and continuing for three seasons, the concerts were given at the Missouri Theater and were free. They were sponsored at that time by the Post-Dispatch.

Since 1924 the student programs have been sponsored by the women's committee of the Symphony Society. From that year until 1934 the concerts were given, like the main performances, at the Odeon. In the last three years the concerts have been presented in the Municipal Auditorium.

It has been the practice for the orchestra to play shorter, lighter works for the student concerts since younger hearers are not expected to be able to sit through long, involved programs. Yesterday's final concert, as is customary, was an all-request program.

Program notes are written especially for the young audiences. On the back page of each program appears a series of questions to test the reader on how carefully he has studied the notes. A blank page, which can be placed in a school notebook, is left for notes on the concert.

CHAMBER MUSIC GROUP ENDS CONCERT SERIES

Program Taken From Beethoven's Later Period Presented at Sheldon Memorial.

The last of three chamber music concerts devoted to the works of Beethoven was given last night in the Sheldon Memorial auditorium under auspices of the St. Louis Ethical Society. The works which made up the program were taken from Beethoven's late period and included the string quartet in C Minor, Opus 131, the piano sonata opus 110, an Elegiac Song, Opus 118 and two movements of a trio for violin, piano and cello, Opus 121a.

Although the music was played with spirit and intelligence much of it needed more rehearsing than the players were apparently able to give it in order that the full value of the compositions under consideration, representing the most exacting and the most subjective period of Beethoven's creative life, could be realized. The C Minor quartet requires long study and thorough assimiliation on the part of players who would undertake its interpretation.

Even so Messrs. Faerber, Steindel, White and Grossman gave a reading that held the interest of the audience. The piano sonata, Opus 110, was played by Corinne Frederick who endowed it with her usual vitality and comprehending musicianship but not with her usual thoroughness.

The performance was sympathetic and was well received. The program was brought to a lively conclusion with the trio played by Faerber, Steindel and Miss Frederick.

GEN. MARKHAM URGES BILLION BE SPENT FOR FLOOD CONTROL

Resolutions weer expected to be passed urging the Federal Government to bear major costs of a flood control program and recommending that the Army Engineers continue in charge of the program.

The conference was opened with an address by Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, who asked Governors of 10 other Valley States to attend or send representatives to a separate meeting at the Statler to consider means of obtaining Federal funds for repair of Federal, State and County roads and city streets damaged by the recent Ohio and Lower Mississippi flood.

Flood Control Cost Problem.

Advocates of placing the expense of flood control on the Federal Government explained that it now pays all costs except that of acquiring floodways and constructing reservoirs, such expenses being met by local agencies, such as levee boards and city governments.

However, it was contended that it was difficult to work out satisfactory arrangements for charging various States for flood control when several were affected, particularly in the case of a project in Northern States which might relieve threats to several States far down the river valley.

Since Army engineers are well organized and have had years of experience during which valuable data has been collected, most of the delegates spoke favorably of the resolution continuing them in charge of flood control.

Suggestion had been made that a Mississippi Valley Authority or an Arkansas Valley Authority be created to cope with the flood problem, operating similarly to the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Expansion of Program Proposed.

Another resolution urged that Congress, at its present session, enlarge its flood control program, including such related problems as conservation of both water and land, irrigation, drainage, reforestation, restoration of natural grass mats, control of soil erosion, protection of wild life and development of public recreation areas.

Urging enlargement of the Federal program, speakers called attention to the fact that the recent disastrous flood originating in the Ohio, would have been even worse along the lower Mississippi, if the Missouri and Upper Mississippi had been flooded at the same time, a condition which they said was quite possible.

Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois was the only chief executive who attended the conference called by Gov. Stark. However, Governors of Kentucky, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Arkansas and Indiana were represented by officials of their highway departments.

Speech by Gov. Stark.

Addressing the group, Gov. Stark said local communities, already in financial difficulties caused by inundation of the land, were unable to bear the cost of repairing tsreets and roads. Although the Hayden-Cartwright Act provides Federal funds for repair of Federal aid road if matched by the State, no provision for rehabilitation has been made.

He cited Mississippi County, Missouri, with half its 16,000 population on relief, as an example of communities which required aid in replacing washed out bridges and resurfacing roads, permitting them to return to their farms and homes. Even as to Federal aid roads, he pointed out, the Hayden-Cartwright bill provides that "emergency repair operations undertaken to restore travel before a finding is made that Federal relief will be granted, will not be included either as a reimbursement or as a part of the relief expenditure."

"The real value of State and Federal relief today," Gov. Stark told the conference, "is to make it possible for these citizens to make a crop this season so they will not be on relief for an additional year and a half. It is hoped that this clause will not be in the new appropriation or that the bureau will, by modification of this ruling, make it possible for these States to be reimbursed for the emergency work which is now being done."

Blind Student Gets Illinois Award.

COURT BILL SAVED IN MISSOURI HOUSE AMID WILD SCENE

ing was done to clean up the profession, the Supreme Court appointed the Bar Committees to be vigilant in purging the bar of its unprofessional members."

"A Pocketbook Bill."

"It is interesting to note that when these committees did become vigilant, we find a movement forming to strip the court of those powers under which the committees are operating. A lawyer is an officer of the court, and he should have a higher regard for the welfare of the public and the courts than his own pocketbook. This, I say, is a pocketbook bill."

Representative Clymer, also an attorney, said he would be willing, if any charge was placed against him for professional misconduct, to let the courts decide whether he was guilty instead of juries. There has not been a single case of disbarment, he said, in which the disbarment was not justified. "I would be ashamed as a member of my profession to vote for this vicious bill," he declared.

TAXI FIRMS AGREE TO MEET WITH STRIKERS IN CHICAGO

Owners Object to Lawyers Being Present; Cabs and Drivers Are Attacked.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 12.—John E. Connor and Thomas M. Finn, Government conciliators, obtained the promise of the taxicab company officers to confer today with strikers' representatives in an effort to settle the eight-day strike of cab drivers.

Presence of attorneys at the conference was a moot point, O'Conner said, with Yellow Cab and Checker Taxi Co. executives stipulating lawyers for both sides be excluded, while the drivers' Strike Committee insisted on the presence of Joseph M. Jacobs, its attorney.

"Flying squadrons" of striking drivers invaded the loop district last night and beat non-union chauffeurs. In outlying sections bricks were hurled through taxi windows, and several machines were damaged with hammers and clubs. Police arrested 30 strikers.

YOUTH, 17, GETS FIVE YEARS FOR SENDING EXTORTION NOTE

George R. Thiel, 17 years old, who pleaded guilty Monday of demanding $25,000 in an extortion letter to Frank J. Boehm, vice-president of the Union Electric Light & Power Co., was sentenced to five years in the Federal Reformatory at Chillicothe, O., by United States District Judge George H. Moore today.

In pleading guilty, Thiel told the Court he had "been reading the papers and thought I'd try to get some easy money." When Judge Moore remarked that if he received leniency he might try again for easy money, the youth replied, "I think I've learned my lesson."

SPHERICAL PICTURES OF MOON

Astronomers Putting Photographs on Glass Globes.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Carnegie Institution astronomers said today Dr. F. E. Wright and Hamilton Wright of the institution's observatory at Mt. Wilson, Cal., were photographing the moon on glass globes instead of flat photographic plates.

The globes are coated with photographic emulsion and pictures of the moon are projected on them. When developed, the globes are expected to give a truer representation of the moon than is possible on flat surfaces.

To all the SMITHS, JONESES, BROWNS, and all other families in town:

We want to call your particular attention to one of the most glorious, uproarious comedy dramas that's come to screen in a long time—"A Family Affair"!

One man's family—his scrapping "in-laws", his romantic daughters, lovable wife, and incorrigible boy! Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was fortunate in securing the grand stars of "Ah, Wilderness!" for the leading roles. Lionel Barrymore is the father, an "old fogey" Idaho Judge. Spring Byington is once more his wife, Cecilia Parker and Eric Linden are the young sweethearts and Mickey Rooney is the son.

The story is modern, up-to-the-minute with road house scandals, government projects, million dollar graft deals and whatnot, but the real punch of "A Family Affair" comes from the heart-warming true-to-life picture of this American family. You'll laugh, love, and smile through tears with them!

Bring the whole family to see "A Family Affair"—You'll all have a swell time!

LUISE RAINER GETS GLAMOR TREATMENT

Studio Decides She Can Wear Eccentric Styles, So Calls in Bead-Workers.

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 12.—From 'way down in Guadalajara, 12 Mexican bead workers have come to Hollywood to help "glamorize" Luise Rainer, the Austrian movie actress with the "I'm-gonna-cry" expression.

Miss Rainer recently won the Academy statuette for a best performance in 1936. Her only weapons were a bustle and her amazing black eyes. Now, the bosses at M.-G.-M. believe that if she could be so attractive in period clothing, she should be sensational as a glamor girl.

That's where the Mexican bead workers come in:

Adrain, the young man who designs clothes for Garbo and Joan Crawford and the other stars, was called into consultation. He said what Miss Rainer needs is red hair and beads.

"Her hair is lovely," said Adrain, "but it's so black the camera can't catch all the beauty. Dye it red and it will look blacker than it really is." This is being done.

Then he sketched some gowns for Miss Rainer. Most of them have beads sprinkled around them. Those without beads have jewels. "But we'll have to have some real bead-workers for this job," he said, "and the only bead-workers I know are in Guadalajara."

"Get 'em" came the order.

The 12 Mexicans are working in 12-hour shifts toward the goal of a new Luise Rainer. Adrian explains it this way: "She has the same flair for unorthodox clothing that Garbo has. She'll look better, actually, in eccentric styles than in conventional models."

He displayed some designs. One satin evening gown is plain in front, but carpeted with beads down the back. Her hats for "The Emperor's candlestick" all bear a recognizable resemblance to a crown. "But that," said Adrian, "has nothing to do with the coronation. It's just eccentric. It will make her glamorous."

LOVE TEAMS ON SCREEN MUST BE SINCERE, DIRECTOR SAYS

W. S. Van Dyke Promotes Type of Affection He Thinks Is Necessary.

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 12.—If a romantic motion picture team is to be convincing, the party of the first part must like the party of the second part pretty well, and vice versa, says W. S. ("One-Take") Van Dyke. The film director is one of Hollywood's hardest-working Cupids—for purely professional reasons, of course.

"In matching a romantic team," Van Dyke said today, "it's necessary to have people who work smoothly together, who really like one another and attract one another."

Not love, necessarily, not affection that has the slightest impression on their off-the-screen relationships. The screen lover may be a happy husband and a good father; the other half of the team a devoted wife.

But you can assume, said Van Dyke, that the two get along quite well. If they don't, the audience detects it, and no amount of histrionics can completely conceal the friction. "If there is the slightest friction there is sure to be trouble. The camera will pick it up and the scenes won't be realistic."

SIT-DOWN IN RESTAURANT 'SATISFACTORILY SETTLED'

Spokesman for Thompson Employes Says Company Agreed to General Wage Increase.

William Vrande, spokesman for a group of 14 unorganized employes of Thompson's restaurant at 620 Washington avenue who conducted a sit-down strike there Tuesday afternoon for higher wages, told reporters yesterday that the dispute had been settled "to the satisfaction of all parties concerned" and that the company had agreed to make a general wage increase for its 200 employes in six St. Louis and one East St. Louis restaurants.

Some wage increases had been granted, Vrande said, and more would be made from time to time on a "merit plan" until all employes had received increases. He said he was not at liberty to disclose the amounts of the increases already granted or to be given.

The agreement was reached, he said, at a meeting of Thompson employes Wednesday night with L. J. Trainor, district supervisor for the Thompson company. At the time of the demonstration Tuesday, spokesmen for the employes, who returned to work Wednesday, said that weekly wages averaged $8.50 and $9.50 for men and $7.50 for women.

PSYCHIATRIST'S IDEA OF 'SUPERIOR' PERSON

Only one in 20 persons approximates the perfection of a superior being, and none achieves it, Dr. Val Satterfield, psychiatrist, said in a lecture last night at the Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A.

His definition of a "superior being," was this: "A self-confident and self-sufficient individual, with average intelligence, a good technique of living, an insight into the reality situation of his environment, a set of healthy motivations and urges, with socially approved patterns of reactivity to social, economic and physical problems; without special fears, hates or prejudices; and with cultural and training advantages."

Inferiority, as he defined it, means "a marked inadequacy to hold up one's burden and an inability to grapple, even to a livelihood-securing minimum, with the world as it exists."

The less well-balanced adult may have, he said, one of the following difficulties: a feeling of his inadequacy to fulfill his ambitions or desires, to meet competition in a field of chance, to make satisfactory social adjustment, or to secure and gratify his sex urges; a consciousness of the "hostile, mysterious and too complex and fearful life into which he has been thrust—the Primordial Anxiety that besets all of us"; a feeling of unbalance within himself, an unusual sensitiveness, inability to focus on a matter at hand, an emotional unbalance that distorts reality, or a poor feeling for the technique of living.

But to say that all are inferior who have such difficulties would be ridiculous, he declared, as everyone has some personality difficulties and problems. But mental superiority means nothing if emotional balance is lacking, he asserted.

Roosevelt Board Members Differ Widely on Value of Co-operatives

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12. — A wide difference in opinion on the consumers' co-operative movement is shown by the members of President Roosevelt's Commission on Co-operatives in its long awaited report on the movement in Europe, it was learned last night.

Some predicted a great development; others saw serious stumbling blocks; several said that "high pressure" promotion of the movement by the Government or others would lead to graft and failure.

Having set out to ascertain if co-operatives offer a way to "cure the ills of the old economic order without resorting to new and uncertain experiments in changing the form of government," the commission reported:

"From the things we learned and the figures we gathered could be woven an Aladdin tale of co-operative success. From a different selection of material could be built a story of co-operative blunders and mistakes and class antagonisms.

"It has been our task to try to tell the story fairly, to picture accurately a movement that has its full share of human errors, but that has brought new hope, new pride of ownership, higher standards of living, to a substantial portion of the people of Western Europe."

The Recommendations.

The publicity staff of the Works Progress Administration, which distributed copies of the report to the press, issued a statement that the commission transmitted these recommendations separately to the President:

1. That a survey of consumer and service co-operatives in the United States be made.

2. That an agency be established or designated to give information, research and advisory service to consumers' co-operatives.

3. That steps be taken to assure consumer organizations "credit parity."

One member, Robin Hood, representative of the National Co-operative Council, told reporters he had not known the recommendations were to be made public.

Low Retail Margins.

In its report, the commission said it found that European co-operatives keep down retail margins by low capital costs, large volume of trade, lower executive salaries, standardized goods and mass buying.

"Co-operatives have not received many special privileges from Government," it reported. "Some access to Government credit, some exemption from taxes on plowed-back surpluses, some subsididy to co-operative education—that is about all."

In a separate section devoted to comment by commission members, Jacob Baker said the experience of Europe and conditions in this country indicate that in 30 or 40 years the field of organized business may be divided roughly between private enterprise, the Government and co-operatives. Baker formerly was Assistant W P A Administrator.

He said the organization of "the general purpose type of co-operative" could be forwarded advantageously by the Federal Government in such areas as the Southern mountain region and in areas of "stranded populations."

He said oil, gasoline and milk are among commodities which seem particularly suitable for co-operative distribution.

Growing in This Country.

Leland Olds, New York power expert, said "there is no question as to the adaptability of co-operative enterprise to the United States, if only because it is already growing on a fairly large scale."

Charles E. Stuart, another member, contended forced organization of co-operatives by "high pressure" promoters and direct Government assistance would disturb business and offer opportunities for graft.

Hood reported that "European co-operative leaders themselves uniformly advise us against Government subsidies and high-pressure Government promotion."

Clifford V. Gregory urged co-operatives to avoid stirring up class hatred and advised private business to meet co-operative competition on "its own ground—that of service to the consumer."

"Honest competition between the two will be good for both, and for the consumer," he said.

PATIENT TO RETURN TO U. S. FROM CHINA IN 'IRON LUNG'

PEIPING, China, March 12.—Physicians attending Frederick Snite, 26 years old, of Chicago, said today he would be moved to the United States in an "iron lung," in May. He was stricken with infantile paralysis a year ago while on a world tour with his parents.

Separate respiration devices, duplicates of the one in which he lies at Peiping Union Medical College Hospital, will be used aboard a special railroad coach for the journey to Shanghai and on the steamer to America.

Doctors said Snite was slowly responding to treatment. The respirator was devised by Dr. Claude E. Forkner, Johns Hopkins University graduate.

TWO MEN CONVICTED OF WENDEL KIDNAPING

Martin Schlossman and Harry Weiss Found Guilty in Second Trial.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Two of five men accused of kidnaping Paul H. Wendel and torturing him into a false "confession" to the Lindbergh baby kidnaping and murder were convicted yesterday by a Brooklyn jury.

Ellis Parker, a Burlington County, New Jersey, detective, and his son, Ellis Jr., also accused, have not been brought to trial here because Gov. Harold Hoffman of New Jersey refused to permit their extradition.

The prosecution alleged the five seized Wendel, former Trenton (N. J.) lawyer and by cruelty forced him to admit a crime he had not committed.

As the jury made its report today Judge Fitzgerald remarked to its members:

"This has been more of an inquest than a trial." There was, he added, "no dispute as to the evidence. What you have done, is very salutary."

The defense said it would appeal.

Counsel for Weiss and Schlossman described them in closing arguments as dupes of the Parkers. They acted in the belief, said Attorney William J. Millard, that the Parkers intended a "meritorious service."

FIVE KILLED IN COLLISION

By the Associated Press.

ORANGE, Cal., March 12.—Three men were burned to death and two women died of injuries received in a collision between an automobile and a truck near here late yesterday. The truck was driven by Glenn Rogers of Fullerton, who was cremated when it caught fire.

Two men in the automobile burned to death and the two women with them, thought by officers to be their wives, died as they were being taken to a hospital. One of the men was identified by Baltimore & Ohio and Pacific Electric Co. passes as George Abelsberger of Benwood, W. Va. The other man and one woman were burned beyond recognition, Coroner Earl Abbey said.

CHARGED WITH USING MAILS TO DEFRAUD

H. R. de Laye, proprietor of a lace curtain cleaning shop at 1038 North Taylor avenue, was arrested yesterday on a Federal indictment charging use of the mails in a scheme to defraud small hotel and boarding house keepers through sale of memberships in the "National Commercial Travelers' Association" at $23.50 a head.

De Laye, identified on stationery of the organization as its president, with "executive headquarters" at the Taylor avenue address, was indicted on 10 counts jointly with R. L. Flanders, described in the indictment as "field man" for the association, who was arrested Wednesday in Rochester, N. Y., officers said.

Each count of the indictment, which was returned last week and suppressed pending the arrests, represented the complaint of a woman boarding house proprietor who charged she had paid the membership fee and found the organization existed in name only. Complainants were scattered through the states of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Florida, Mississippi and Texas.

The indictment charges De Laye and Flanders falsely represented the membership in the organization included several thousand traveling salesmen and that a "directory," issued to each member, listed names of member hotels which actually had no connection with the "association."

Assistant United States Attorney Henry G. Morris estimated the defendants had gleaned several thousand dollars in the last two years, principally from woman boarding house proprietors who hoped to benefit by obtaining listings in the directory.

The indictment quoted letters, mailed to subscribers from St. Louis and signed with De Laye's name, stating that the "application" for membership, "as recommended by our Mr. Flanders," had been approved and that the directory, business cards and an enameled emblem of the association would be forwarded for $13.50, collect. Flanders already had received $10 from the applicant in person, it is charged.

The defendants also falsely represented, according to the indictment, that memberships for traveling men carried attractive insurance features.

De Laye, after his arrest, refused to discuss the charges. Flanders will be brought to St. Louis for trial, which was set for May 4 in Federal Judge Charles B. Davis' court. Maximum penalty under the charge is five years in prison and $1000 fine.

FAKE SWEEPSTAKES PLANT IN MASSACHUSETTS RAIDED

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, March 12.—Assistant United States Attorney Henry M. Leen today announced postal inspectors had raided a printing plant in Springfield, Mass., and seized the original plates from which it is charged millions of fake Canadian National Sweepstakes lottery tickets had been printed.

The seizure today followed the arrest in Botson yesterday of a man booked as John P. Cooley of Longmeadow, a suburb of Springfield, on a charge of of transporting lottery tickets.

United States Attorney Francis J. W. Ford said a $5,000,000 lottery, drawing thousands of dollars weekly from New Englanders had been exposed. He said a woman resident of Portland, Me., had described the lottery and its 50 New England agents.

His assistant, Leen, said the printer was not arrested in the Springfield raid today but had volunteered information to Postal Inspectors Tennyson Jefferson and Ralph Dakin, who made the raid.

Regent Says Place Will Be Offered to C. A. Dykstra, Cincinnati City Manager.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., March 12. — The Executive Committee of the University of Wisconsin Regents, it was learned yesterday, will offer the university presidency to Clarence A. Dykstra, Cincinnati city manager.

Dean George Sellery has been acting president since Dr. Glenn Frank was ousted in January, following a fight within the Board of Regents over charges against him of administrative incompetence. A member of the committee said the group has selected Dykstra but that he has not yet been hired.

Dykstra, at Cincinnati, said he had received no offer from the regents. The executive committeeman said his group would meet probably Saturday or Sunday at a city between here and Cincinnati to discuss terms with Dykstra. When the committee's choice is presented to the Board of Regents as a whole at a meeting March 18 and 19, he said, it is "practically certain" it will be approved.

The committee was reported to have set $15,000 as the maximum salary to be paid the new president. Dykstra receives $25,000 a year at Cincinnati. Dr. Glenn Frank was paid $20,000 and expenses for the upkeep of the president's home when he took office in 1921, but the figure was cut to $15,000 by the time he was dismissed.

Long recognized as an authority in the field of public administration, Dykstra has served with several organizations and universities since his graduation from the University of Iowa in 1903.

He served as assistant in political science at the University of Chicago, instructor in history and government at Ohio State University from 1907 to 1909, head of the Department of Political Science at the University of Kansas from 1909 to 1918, and professor of municipal administration at the University of California from 1923 to 1930.

Before going to Cincinnati in 1930, he also had been secretary of the Chicago City Club, the Los Angeles City Club and Commissioner of the Los Angeles Water and Power Department. He was president of the International Association of City Managers for one year.

THE REV. G. A. CAMPBELL TO RESIGN HIS PULPIT

The Rev. Dr. George A. Campbell, pastor of Union Avenue Christian Church, Union boulevard and Enright avenue, former national president of the Disciples of Christ, will announce his resignation to the congregation Sunday morning, to be effective Jan. 31, 1938. That date will mark the twentieth anniversary of his pastorate.

Illness has caused Dr. Campbell's decision, of which members of the church's official board have been informed. He is 68 years old. In setting the date of his retirement, Dr. Campbell said he would be willing to leave earlier if, in the opinion of the board, this should be best for the church. Members of the board indicated today that they would not follow this suggestion, but would ask Dr. Campbell to complete his 20 years as pastor.

As pastor of Union Avenue Church, the largest congregation of the Disciples of Christ in the St. Louis area, Dr. Campbell has been a leading figure in the city's church life. He was national president of the denomination from 1932 to 1933, and in the following year, 1933-34, was president of the St. Louis Metropolitan Church Federation.

He is a native of Ontario, Canada, of Scotch parentage, and was ordained in 1890. He was pastor for 15 years of Austin Christian Church, Chicago, and was for eight years pastor in Hannibal, Mo., from which he came to Union Avenue Church early in 1918. He is a trustee of Drake University, Des Moines, Ia., of Culver-Stockton and William Woods Colleges in Missouri and of the Bible College at the University of Missouri.

New Pay Schedule for Assessors.

MARION, Ill., March 12.—Deputy tax assessors in Williamson County will work on the "piece work" system this year. The County Board ruled assessors will be paid 15 cents for each property schedule turned in for property within a city or village and 25 cents for each rural property holder's schedule.

OIL INDUSTRIES COMMITTEE TAKES ISSUE WITH GOV. STARK

Says Opposition to Proposed Increase in State Gasoline Tax Is Increasing.

The Missouri Petroleum Industries Committee, Jefferson City, took issue today with Gov. Stark's statement that sentiment favoring the proposed 1-cent increase in the State gasoline tax was increasing, declaring that on the contrary opposition was stronger than ever. The increase would become effective in December, 1938, under a bill pending in the Legislature.

Advocating economy rather than higher taxes, the statement declared the best plan for further highway development would depend on the road survey report to be made by the United States Bureau of Public Roads and the State Highway Department. During the next three years, it was estimated, $34,000,000 would become available for new road construction, $6,000,000 more than has been spent during the last three years.

The Governor's position on gasoline taxes had changed since 1928, the statement asserted, declaring that as chairman of the Citizens' Road Bond Campaign Committee he then favored highway bonds over higher gasoline taxes.

'NEW LABOR STATESMANSHIP'

Term Applied to C I O Chiefs by Josephine Roche in Talk.

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., March 12. — Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury said last night a "new type of labor statesmanship" is practiced by John L. Lewis, Sidney Hillman and their associates.

Miss Roche, addressing the Newark Junior Chamber of Commerce, asserted recent developments along industrial fronts have brought "epoch making collective bargaining contracts with great constructive and responsible industrial labor unions."

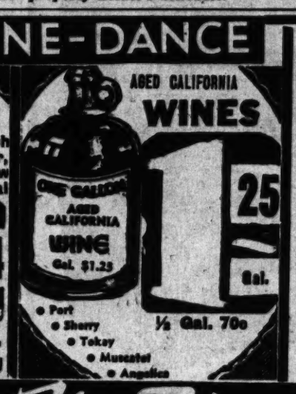

She said the General Motors and steel agreements "are not only the most important chapter in labor history—they are far-reaching in their effect on all our national economic life." Miss Roche cited also recent negotiations between the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, headed by Hillman, and the clothing industry. She formerly operated a coal mine in Colorado.

Careless Driving Charge Dismissed.

THE GREATER ST. LOUIS CONSUMERS COLOR CONTEST

Emerson Stay-ins' Daily Routine and Discipline

Guards, Fire Patrol, Courts, Bible Reading, Hymns, Games, Music, and Regular Meals in Plant.

Duties, discipline and daily routine of the 200 Emerson Electric stay-in strikers were outlined in detail today to a Post-Dispatch reporter by Frank Schlieman, veteran employe, who is captain of the inside group at the company's motor plant, 2018 Washington avenue, where members of the United Electrical & Radio Workers are in complete charge, inside and out. There are no stay-ins at the firm's fan factory, Twenty-first street and Lucas avenue, also shut down by the strike of 2000 men and women which began last Monday.

Each of the stay-in strikers has been assigned regular duties by a committee headed by Schlieman, a tool and die maker for Emerson Electric for 30 years and former head of the company union, which the strikers dissolved. That portion of the plant used as living quarters by the strikers is swept and cleaned daily. A guard detail keeps an eye on first floor windows and meets visitors admitted through the main entrance on passes issued by the union. Every precaution is taken against a surprise assault from outside.

Another section of the guard patrols the eight floors of the factory day and night as a precaution against fire. Fire hazards have been eliminated as far as possible by the strikers, who confine smoking to designated areas. The guard is changed every four hours.

Trial for Any Violations.

Strikers failing in their duty or caught breaking rules are brought before a "judge," who passes sentence following a hearing. Schlieman is the "prosecutor." Defense counsel is appointed to present the defendant's side. Two men who smoked in restricted areas received sentences of extra duty. Another, found with an extra ace in a pinochle game, received a paddling. When the "judge," Max Fuchs, thoughtlessly lighted a cigarette in a restricted zone he was reprimanded by the strikers at large.

Schlieman announced that repeated infraction of rules or failure in duty would be followed by ejection of the offender from the plant. Gambling is prohibited, and a request for beer was denied.

Following breakfast, Schlieman, who says he has "done some preaching," conducts a Bible reading, and the strikers sing hymns. Sanitary regulations are enforced and shower baths in the building are used. Some of the men have razors, but the majority have decided to allow their beards to grow until the dispute for recognition of the C I O union and wage increases is settled. No women are permitted on the premises, but relatives and friends may talk to the stay-ins from the sidewalk. Clean clothing is brought to the plant by relatives, who take away soiled garments.

When not on duty the strikers read, play cards and ping pong and listen to the radio. Books and magazines have been supplied, and a "reading room" established. An orchestra of string instruments, harmonica, saxophone and drums, was organized and gives concerts. An amateur drummer in the crowd devised the usual equipment of a jazz band drummer from boxes and metal motor parts. "Amateur night" programs are presented and performers whose songs and imitations fail to please the audience get the "gong" from the trap drummer. Copies of popular and union songs have been furnished by the Labor College.

Stay-ins sleep on cots, meals are served on paper plates. The union is soliciting donations of food, which is prepared in a restaurant across the street from the plant. Women strikers assist in the preparation and a "chow detail" take the food to the stay-ins. The menu to date has included roast, fish, stew, chili, spaghetti, potatoes, pie, cake, bread and coffee. Cigars and cigarettes also are furnished.

Communication by Mail.

Although telephones in the plant are connected, the switchboard is in the main office in another building, and the strikers do not use the phone. They communicate with their families and friends by mail, or through messenger. About 50 of the stay-ins are heads of families. A few strikers left the plant today to vote in the municipal primary election.

An educational program has been planned, featuring labor speakers. There will be movies, of the home variety, including scenes taken by Joe Jones, artist, on a recent trip to Mexico.

Stay-in striking, as practiced by the Emerson union men, appears to have its advantages over outside picketing, and is not unlike a well-conducted military defense. The Emerson strikers have come to regard the motor plant as home, and when asked where they wanted last week's pay checks sent, replied almost unanimously "2018 Washington avenue."

Reports of Wage Adjustments in Other Electric Plants.

William Sentner, C I O representative in charge of the strike of Emerson employes, said today union members had reported wage adjustments in the Wagner, Moloney and Century electric manufacturing companies.

At Wagner Electric, Sentner said, the B shift, going to work at 4 p. m., received a 5 per cent raise and the C shift, starting work at 12:30 a. m., got an increase of 6 per cent. No increase was given the day shift.

Employes of Moloney Electric reported they had information a minimum of 50 cents an hour would be established this month. Emerson strikers are demanding a similar minimum wage.

Officers of the Wagner and Moloney firms would not discuss the reported wage adjustments. Century Electric employes said they understood they were to receive a bonus, representing a percentage of profits, every three months. Century Electric employes received a 5 per cent bonus on last year's business.

JONES FIGHTS DISBARMENT

Wilfred Jones, lawyer, who is under 10-year penitentiary sentence for his part in the Muench baby hoax mail fraud, filed yesterday a motion to quash disbarment proceedings brought against him by the Bar Disciplinary Committee.

The motion, mailed to the Circuit Clerk's office from City Jail, contends the Circuit Court lacks jurisdiction because Jones is not licensed in this circuit and also because he does not claim to be a licensed attorney. This apparently refers to his resignation from the bar, which he presented recently in St. Louis County. Circuit Judge Julius R. Nolte has deferred acceptance of the resignation.

CLEANERS' EMPLOYES BOOED BY STRIKERS

Pickets Jeer Workers Entering Howard's, Inc., Plant on North Grand.

Strike pickets at the Howard's Cleaners, Inc., plant, 2515 North Grand boulevard, hooted and jeered a few employes who reported for work this morning. Howard's employes who are members of the International Association of Cleaning & Dye House Workers, Local No. 20, went on strike Wednesday in protest against the company's refusal to recognize the union for collective bargaining.

The demonstration this morning followed announcement by J. A. Davis, president of the company, that the strikers would be replaced by new employes. According to the pickets, four drivers and six new men entered the plant. Except for the chorus of jeers and catcalls from 35 men and women pickets, the employes were not molested. The strikers said they learned that Davis tried to get drivers not on strike to operate pressing machines, but the drivers had refused to do the work.

Ted Graham, organizer of the union, said he expected to meet with Robert Lungstras of the Lungstras Dyeing & Cleaning Co., following a report by workers that Lungstras had indicated he was ready to talk collective bargaining with the union. The Lungstras Co. employes between 500 and 600 workers at its main plant, 2101 South Vandeventer avenue, according to Graham, and operates 68 branch stores. The union recently reached a collective bargaining agreement with 20 cleaning and dyeing firms employing about half of the 2000 workers in the trade in the city and suburbs.

Graham said today the union had voted to admit office employes of Howard's, Inc., to membership and the 25 office workers would be invited to join. The company, in a newspaper advertisement, stated it could not recognize the union as the sole bargaining agency since it did not have proof that all of its 247 employes were union members. The advertisement said 141 employes remained at work.

According to Graham the average wage of Howard's employes was $10 for a 54-hour week, and the union is seeking better conditions through collective bargaining. The strikers are picketing the company's 75 branches. The branch managers are not organized.

Armed Men Storm Mexican Town.

MEXICO, D. F., March 12.—One person was killed and Government offices were sacked last Wednesday when an undetermined number of armed men stormed the town of Tlaxco, Tlaxcala State, according to belated dispatches received here today.

PRINTERS' SIT-DOWN STRIKE ENDS WHEN POLICE ARRIVE

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 12.—Police with trespass warrants ended a "sit-down" strike of 50 Daily News printers early today. The strikers left the building when told they would be arrested if they remained. The paper missed its early edition, but arranged to print a four-page edition later at the Miami Herald plant.

A spokesman for the men, all members of the International Typographical Union, said the strike was started at 6:30 last night because of the breakdown of negotiations with the News for a contract to replace one that expired last September. Hal Leyshon, editor of the News, said, however, that the paper had a valid working agreement with the union and the strike was "illegal" under union rules.

Printers at the Morning Tribune started a sit-down strike about the same time as the News crew yesterday but called it off in less than an hour after being granted a temporary wage increase of $3 weekly, pending further negotiations.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 12.—Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, said today he had ordered back to work members of the union who started a strike last night in the plant of the Miami Daily News.

Prison Quarantine Lifted.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 12.—Warden J. M. Sanders announced today the lifting of the quarantine put on the State penitentiary. An outbreak of smallpox last fall led to the quarantine, which was temporarily lifted in December. It was reimposed because of prevalence of influenza.

STOCKS DIP, MEET BUYING; GOVERNMENT BONDS DOWN

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Heaviest selling of U. S. Government securities in more than a year helped to chill stock market sentiment today, but late buying support reduced or canceled early losses of fractions to 3 points.

Steels and motors, off during a flurry of offerings after noon, came back for gains before the close. Leathers and aircrafts pointed upward. The majority of carriers and utilities had difficult going.

Except for one or two intervals the activity was relatively slow. Transfers approximated 2,300,000 shares.

Speculative forces were a bit subdued in view of nervousness in recently soaring commodities, the general downtrend in bonds and suggestions from Washington the administration might take steps to halt a possible inflationary boom.

On the other hand, 1936 company statements continued to confirm the recovery trend and current business reports apparently indicated public spending still is proceeding at a high rate.

The French franc moved up in foreign exchange transactions as the new French defense loan was oversubscribed. Wheat at Chicago was off 1¼@1⅝ cents a bushel and corn was ⅝@2¼ lower.

At mid-afternoon the French currency was up .00⅝ of a cent at 4.59⅛ cents and sterling was 3-16 of a cent improved at $4.88⅝.

News of the Day.

Rails lagged despite a more than seasonal upturn in last week's carloadings. The total of 734,127 was the best since last December.

Settlement of the Douglas Aircraft strike heartened this stock. The company agreed to recognize the CIO union affiliate as a bargaining agent for its membership.

Due to the Chrysler labor shutdown, there was a rather sharp recession in the turnout of new cars this week.

Of interest to steel followers was another advance of $1 a ton in steel scrap at Pittsburgh to $23.50, a new top since April, 1923.

Action of the International Tin Committee at London in raising production quotas for participating countries was studied by those who have been operating on the long side of commodity stocks and staples futures.

A reversal in export copper prices was coincident with opinions expressed by observers in this field that rapidly growing output of the red metal throughout the world will soon more nearly equal consumption.

In line with swiftly rising costs of basic materials, coupled with the upward spiral of wage scales, financial quarters noted three of the principal typewriter manufacturers had lifted prices of their products 5 per cent. It was believed price hoists in many other lines were imminent.

Wall street interpreted the rise of $87,000,000 in brokers' loans last week partly as a preparation for coming Government financing, but it was also thought the larger figure was the result of increasing speculation in stock exchanges.

Weekly Commercial Review.

A sustaining influence was seen in the week-end survey of Dun & Bradstreet which found retail sales at a new peak for the year as payroll boosts and Easter demand packed stores with customers.

Replacement orders from the flood areas were said to have brought fresh impetus to the wholesale division and, despite labor upsets in various sections of the country, a more fortified advance spread to most industries.

Retail volumes for the week were placed at from 6 to 12 per cent ahead of the preceding period and 15 to 30 per cent over the same week last year.

Would Give Common Stock or Cash For Part of Arrears on Issue If Rest Is Waived.

Holders of the preferred stock of the St. Louis Car Co. are being asked to accept common stock of the company in lieu of part of the dividends which are in arrears. A letter from the company requests the holders to waive three years' accumulated dividends and to accept on Nov. 1 one share of the common stock which has a market value of about $15 a share, or, if the cash position of the company permits, to accept two years' dividends—$14—on Oct. 31.

HEAVIEST BOND TRADE SINCE 1920; U. S. ISSUES DROP

Total Sales of $35,000,000 Include $23,000,000 Government Liens— Offerings Unsettle General Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 12.—In record trading since 1920 U. S. Government loans in the bond market had a wide break today with losses ranging from 7-32 to 25-32 of a point.

The turnover in the bond market was nearly $35,000,000, of which some $23,000,000 was in the U. S. Government division.

Bond traders attributed the drop to various influences, including selling by banks in preparation for the higher reserve requirements and possibility of stiffening interest rates, and cumulative effects of the decline in bond prices generally since the turn of the year. In addition, it was said, the market had encountered selling from dealers who had bought maturing notes for the Treasury's March 15 conversion offer.

Off fractions to more than a point were such corporate issues as American Telephone 3¼s of 1966, Bethlehem Steel 4½s, Detroit Edison 4½s, Northern Pacific 4s and Pacific Gas 3¾s.

Convertible bonds lost ground in sympathy with a lower stock market. Youngstown Sheet & Tube 3½s, Studebaker 6s and Great Northern 4s were off 2 to 3 points at one time.

BOND NOTES

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Southern Pacific Railway Co. today to issue $21,200,000 of investment certificates. The railway's application called for sale of the certificates at 97.377 per cent of par and accrued dividends to Salomon Brothers & Hutzler, Dick and Merle Smith and Stroud & Co., Inc.

NEW YORK, March 12.—An issue of $3,000,000 first mortgage 4½ per cent bonds of Pittsburgh Coke & Iron Co. was offered today at 101 by a syndicate headed by Hemphill, Noyes & Co.

Simultaneously the syndicate offered 15,000 shares of $5 preferred stock, without par value, at $98.50 a share, and 40,000 common shares at $11 a share. Offerings were pursuant to a refinancing plan to reduce company's funded debt.

Proceeds of financing were to be applied to retirement of $3,385,000 first mortgage 6 per cent bonds and to purchase of not exceeding $2,000,000 principal amount of outstanding 10-year 5 per cent debentures.

SHARP BREAK IN THE PRICE OF TIN ABROAD

LONDON, March 12.—The unofficial market for tin, which has been spurting presumably because of its necessity to the world armament race, registered a price drop of $37 a ton yesterday evening after the close of the official market.

SINGAPORE, March 12.—The price of tin took a spectacular dive on local markets today from $149 a picul—about 133⅓ pounds—to $130.

The decline, roughly equivalent to a drop from $1457 to $1282 a ton, was attributed in market circles to a widespread belief in an immediate lifting of national quotas.

(Because of the difference in time, trading is possible on oriental exchanges when European and American markets are closed.)

U. S. ENVOY MAKES PROTEST TO GERMANY

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 12.—United States Ambassador William E. Dodd explained to the German Foreign Minister, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, today that German press attacks on United States citizens tend to "becloud German-American relations.

Without demanding a formal apology for remarks by German newspapers concerning "LaGuardia incident," Dodd visited Von Neurath on instructions from Washington and called his attention to the published matter.

Dodd, who remained in the Wilhelmstrasse half an hour, said his instructions were merely to call attention to the "gravity" of the situation caused by the press attacks. He said he came away with a feeling that Baron von Neurath fully realized the United States point of view but that he could not at the time commit himself as to whether the German Government would apologize or compel the newspapers to print retractions.

Dodd said: "We accompanied the delivery of our instructions with a verbal expose of what the attacks mean in the way of beclouding German-American relations, but left it to the German authorities to draw their own conclusions."

(La Guardia on March 3 suggested to a group of Jewish women that the directors of the New York world fair in 1939 should place a figure of "that brown-shirted fanatic who is menacing the peace of the world" in a "hall of horrors." The State Department expressed its regret that such a statement should have been made, after a formal protest from Germany. In the resultant press campaign in Germany against the Mayor, the attack was broadened to such an extent Washington considered a protest necessary.)

German Newspaper Articles Referred to In Neutrality Bill Debate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Criticism of Mayor La Guardia of New York and American women in German newspapers was injected into the neutrality bill debate today by Representative Rogers (Rep.), Massachusetts.

Quoting from newspaper accounts of a recent meeting addressed by the New York Mayor, Mrs. Rogers said: "I have taken this opportunity because so few people in the United States realize what the German press is saying about American womanhood. . . . I am not rattling any sabers but I do know that the manhood of the United States bitterly resents the attitude o fthe (German) Government."

Representative Knutson (Rep.), Minnesota, who voted against the United States' entry into the World War in 1917, arose to protest against what he termed conviction of a great people "at an ex parte hearing."

"I don't think we should take cognizance of all these old women's tales that come to us from across the sea," he said.

Royal Typewriter Co. Raises Pay.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 12.—The Royal Typewriter Co. announced today pay increases of from 7 to 8 per cent for factory employes and 5 per cent for salaried workers, effective March 15. More than 5300 persons will benefit. Charles B. Cook, vice-president, said the company's business is 66 per cent ahead of the peak year, 1929. The factory increases alone will add $572,000 to the annual payroll, Cook said.

WELL, I'LL TELL YOU—By BOB BURNS

IT AIN'T always a good idea to make snap judgment but it's a whole lot better to figger a thing out yourself than it is to call in the advice of a lot of other people. I don't think anybody knew this better than my uncle who was a judge down home. One day a woman come in with her husband and told my uncle she wanted a divorce. It took her all mornin' to tell why she wanted so much alimony and all afternoon to tell why she didn't want her husband anymore. When she got through, my uncle says "Well, you deserve a whole lot of money for havin' to live with such a terrible man." The husband spoke up and says "Judge your Honor, I'd like to tell my side of this story" and my uncle says "No, I'd jest as soon you wouldn't. I've got to give a fair and impartial decision in this case, and if I hear both sides of the story it might confuse me."

A Trick Conceded

By Ely Culbertson

MORE contracts are fulfilled by the concession of a trick to the defenders at precisely the proper time than by any other single maneuver. But I cannot stress too strongly "the proper time" phrase. The philosophy of inexperienced players seems to be that they are all right as long as they hang onto the lead. The consequence is that the first seven or eight tricks of their average game contract roll merrily along, but suddenly their is a collapse. In the hand shown below the gracious concession of a trick would have returned a handsome dividend.

South, dealer.

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
| 1♠ | 2♦ | Pass | Pass |
| 4♠ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Over West's two diamond bid North had a close decision as to whether to pass or bid two spades. His choice was, in my opinion, the better course. When South had rebid, however, North properly came forth with a raise.

West opened the queen of diamonds. Dummy covered, as did East, and declarer ruffed. A low spade to dummy brought the queen from West, and then declarer took two more rounds of trumps, ending in dummy.

The king of hearts was laid down, and a low heart led toward the ace, declarer hoping that West would have to win his trick and, since he probably would be reduced to diamonds and clubs, would be forced to lay down either the club ace or to lead the top diamond which, after declarer had ruffed, would establish dummy's ten, dummy's fourth heart becoming an entry. When East, however, played the heart jack on the second heart lead, declarer was forced to win with the ace and a third round of hearts put East, not West, on lead. The club ten through the king gave the defenders three club tricks for the defeat of the contract.

HAD declarer paid a little attention to the bidding and to the particular trump played by West, a far different result might have ensued. West's bidding clearly had marked him with no less than 10 cards in the minor suits. The spade queen certainly could be read as a singleton, since West would not be so obliging as to put it up needlessly. After winning with dummy's king, declarer should have seen that his best opportunity lay in stripping West of his exit cards and forcing him to lead a club. Thus, dummy's low diamond should have been ruffed at the third trick, and the ace and king of hearts cashed. With West following to two hearts, the assumption would be that he now was reduced to diamonds and clubs and, of course, he was marked with the diamond jack, both from his bid and from his opening lead. The ten of diamonds now should be led, and declarer should joyfully concede this trick to West while discarding a low club. West, in with the diamond jack, would have a sorry choice to make. If he led a fourth round of diamonds, dummy could ruff while declarer got rid of another club, and a club lead would promote South's club king to a trick.

This is a "type" that occurs time and again, and it will pay the student to study its possibilities thoroughly.

Why Grow Old?

By Josephine Lowman

The very best foundation you can include in your spring and summer wardrobes is the set of combination exercises I am giving you this week. These exercises reduce both the abdomen and the hips.

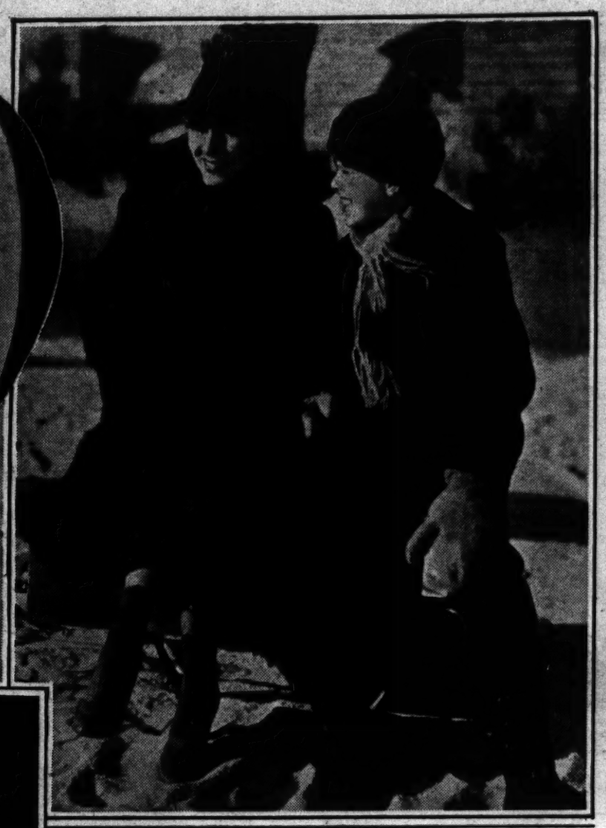

Exercise: This is a "hiptummy" exercise. Lie on the back with the arms out at sides, shoulder height, legs straight and feet together. Keep the hands in the same position, touching the floor. As you roll over on the left side of the hips, bend both knees up close to the stomach. As you roll back on your back, straighten the legs, bringing the feet close to the floor but not touching the floor. Now roll over on the right side of the hips. Bend the knees up as you do so. Do you get the picture? The knees bend as you roll on the sides and straighten as you roll on the back.

What is your figure moulding problem? If you want your questions answered directly, send a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope. All correspondence will be strictly confidential. Address your letters to Josephine Lowman, care of St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Complexion Is Partly Matter Of Health

By Helen Jameson

BEAUTY seekers who fancy that all the complexion needs are cleanliness, lubricating and laying on the drug store brand of loveliness don't get very far. There's more to the business than that.

The kin structure, every cell that covers the body, must be functioning properly. It has work to do, nothing must interfere with it. Other organs must be in good condition —the kidneys, intestinal tract, the liver. If anything is wrong with one of them, the complexion suffers. It may take on a yellow cast, go gray or pale, appear blotchy. So proper care of the facial coating consists primarily of taking care of the body as a whole.

It's easy enough to see what a digestive disturbance will do to the complexion, how it will cause it to lose color. Plain as the nose on your face what less of sleep will do, producing pouches under the eyes and a hang-dog look around the jaws.

To make for the well-being of the complexion, a woman should have fresh air and exercise, subsist on a nutritious, simple diet, and know something about mental hygiene, since thoughts are reflected on the countenance.

THE daily bath is a marvelous beautifier, hustling up circulation, scouring off dead epidermal scales and deposits left by body wastes that are eliminated by the skin.

At the first signs of infection, seek a physician. It may signify some internal disturbance. It isn't safe to let it go on. Never touch the face with soiled fingers or gloves. The very dust in the air may set up a state of blotches or eruptions.

People who are shallow breathers have pale skins. Nose infections are a menace to the roses and cream complexion. Children who are mouth breathers seldom have skins of good color. Do your five minutes of breathing exercises every morning before your bath and you will find that you chuck away your rouge pad, you'll be growing blushes of your own. And they're ever so much nicer than those you get at the cosmetic counter.

To combat bacteria, there is nothing like soap. When washing the face foam up a thick, rich lather, friction it into the flesh, rinse it away thoroughly. Many an otherwise fastidious woman is careless about face washing. Next to the hands the human phiz catches more atmospheric filth than any other part of the body. As sebaceous glands are active on that area, the face scrubber is combating a combination of oil and dirt. When she tries to wash that team of troubles makers out of a fine handkerchief, she doesn't find it an easy matter. She has to use elbow grease.

WOMEN AT LUNCH

By Marjorie Hillis.

Author of "Live Alone and Like It."

IF every business woman would budget her lunch hours as carefully as she does (or ought to do) her salary, she's get a lot more out of them. Of course, some noontimes have to be spent in shopping or visiting the dentist, whether you like it or not, but a lot more are just frittered away, without having either fun or rest.

Often you have to spend the whole hour on the lunch itself—in these days of crowded restaurants. But you don't have to go to the same restaurant, or even the same two or three restaurants, day in and day out, in the majority of cities. It's easy to drop into one you have come to like, just around the corner from your office, but that's one way of getting into a rut, and ruts invariably wear a little of the sparkle off anybody. It's worth while to investigate the restaurants you could manage to get to within the time you can spend. You may find a Russian one or an Italian one, a French one or a Chinese one, an inexpensive one or a very grand one indeed. Go to the grand one once in a while and have only one dish, if you don't want to pay for more. It's foolish to be embarrassed by giving a small order —what with half the smartest women dieting and ordering next to nothing, anyway!

Order unfamiliar dishes occasionally. Learn the art of ordering cleverly in restaurants—so few people master it! If you eat alone, study the menu and the other people; don't just rehash some minor problem in your mind. If you eat with someone else, don't let it always be the same person. Use your lunch hours to cultivate your friendships. If you've met someone you'd like to know better, call her up and ask her to have lunch with you. Lots of lasting friendships have begun this way.

While you shouldn't skimp on luncheon or hurrying through it too often, no one is harmed by a 15-minute meal at a lunch counter once or twice a week. A soup and a sandwich take scarcely that long and are all you really need. This should give you time to visit an exhibition, if there are any near you. And are you sure there aren't? Good exhibitions aren't always in art galleries; they are often in shops and libraries and other places and some of the best of them are free. If you don't enjoy them at first, keep on going anyway. You will probably acquire the taste soon, as one does with olives.

LARGE shops are specially good for learning more about interior decoration. Some have enchanting modern rooms and some have really fine collections of antiques. In most of them you can learn about the modern trend, which is a good idea, whether you want any of it in your home or not. Not liking things, without really knowing anything about them, isn't very intelligent.

A good many churches have services at noon, especially during Lent, and some have lovely music. There couldn't be a better way to spend your lunch hour on a day when things are hectic at the office than to go to church. It needn't be your own church, or even a church of your own denomination. We'd all be better off if we knew more about one another's faiths.

And every city has its special places of interest and some quaint or foreign sections. In most places, one can discover a spot—along the waterfront, or in a secluded section of a park—where it's fun to go with a book and a picnic lunch, now and then, when the weather gets warmer.

HELEN HAYES' DAUGHTER MAKES A STAGE DEBUT

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, March 11.

A THEATRICAL event of much importance took place on Broadway a few nights ago. It received considerable publicity, but not as much as I feel it deserves. It was the stage debut of Mary MacArthur.

The name means nothing in particular? Or even in general? Then it was the first appearance, on any platform, of the daughter of Helen Hayes, that glorious little woman of the theater, and Charles MacArthur, her clever playwright husband. If ever the fates of the play-world show bright upon a child, they should shed their rays upon little Mary.

The occasion of Mary's debut (one night only) was a memory and a tradition. It was on her own seventh birthday that Helen had first stepped on a stage—and I think it was that of the Columbia Theater, in Washington. At any rate, little Helen Hayes Brown began her own career as a trouper on that day and at that age—so young Mary was permitted to "walk on" during the final scene of her mother's current triumph, "Victoria Regina." What must have been little Helen's thoughts as she saw her own chick step on the stage with her, where she sat swaddled up as Old Queen Vic of pious memory!

Some of the men of the theater made an event of it. Alec Woollcott sent a wire and Manager Gilbert Miller a jar of cookies. But Director Bill Howard, if reports be true, topped them all. He sent little Mary a telegram offering her the role of "Scarlett" in "Gone With the Wind"!

OUR set was drenched with tears all last week. Dear Noel Coward was abed with laryngitis, and with his one-act plays off the boards, we were hard put to it to spend a smart evening in town. (Oh, yes, we were!)

Sometimes it's tough when theaters come in chains. We have such huge ones in New York. One of them here, numbering 38 neighborhood houses, has been having a little trouble—so there's a uniformed cop on duty in each of its houses!

Well, they've been at it again. Now, it's the lovely Frances Langford, of radio and screen, who has the prettiest figure in the amusement business. This on the solemn vote of our Empire Mannequin School, which teaches girls how to wear sables with an air. The best Marlene Dietrich, Ginger Rogers and Myrna Loy could get was an honorable mention. But the girls will bear up, no doubt. . . . Incidentally, Mrs. C. Van V. Smillie, head of the school, says this is the way for a girl to walk—"chest high, not out; stomach up, not in, and shoulders straight." Sound's like Kipling's "If," except that it would end "You'll be a mannequin, my daughter!" . . .

Estelle Hamburger, executive of a big shop here, tells me that it will soon be tag day for all merchandise; that more of us all the time are demanding to know all about the material that goes into the things we buy. And not a bad idea! . . . A lot of wan shop-hounds and style-sharks are getting home from Europe these days. The girls say the crossings are the worst they've ever made—and that's suffering!. . .

June Hamilton Rhodes, that most vivid of high-powered publicists, has just darted off to Hollywood on behalf of her three pet items—velvet, orchids, jewelry. Never still a minute, that June! . . .

Everybody in the business world tries to cash in on the Simpson romance. Now it's a Paris glove firm, with the swell phrase, "The best-gloved woman in the world!"

• • •

This is a brand-new one on me—a jeweled anklet sewed right on a stocking, saving wear and tear on hosiery for those ladies who go in for anklets. The one I saw was made of silk-elastic trimmed with a rhinestone bow, and the stocking was in the shade called "desert sun." Naturally, only one to a pair! Let's be genteel!

Is Charm but A Transient Attraction?

By Emliy Post

IS THE asset people usually speak of as CHARM only a transient attraction, which one either has or hasn't? And is it confined to people only? If so, I can't account for having heard of a charming house or for your having written about charm in chins. Can elderly people have it as well as young people, and does it in any case depend upon good looks? I have been given a paper to write in school on the subject of charm and after spending all this evening really thinking about it I'm more confused than ever. Will you explain the meaning of charm in its best sense?

Answer: Charm is something for which the world has been trying to find the perfect definition for the last three hundred years. The hospitable host of a certain great estate abroad even had a guest book in which each partaker of his hospitality was expected, like Tommy Tucker, not to sing for his supper but to contribute his (or her) definition of charm. Casually speaking, it is that which pleases. But to be real, it must please—not you alone, nor me, but many. It is also that quality in a person or in an object or in a place, of which we never grow tired. At the present moment the overuse of the word charm is becoming abuse and it is to a great extent despoiling its meaning in the same way exactly that lady and gentlemen and elegant have been despoiled through the vulgarizing effect of over use.

I have been assigned a topic in school on "The Instincts of a Lady and Gentleman" and it would help me more than I can tell if you would write be briefly about them.

Answer: The instincts of a lady and gentlemen are much the same. Both are equally punctilious in the payment of their obligations, equally averse to pressing their advantage and above everything else they can be counted on always to show consideration for the rights and feelings of others, no matter what their station in life may be.

You say you have a very good position where you are. It is a serious matter to give up a good position anywhere just now, and start out on an uncertainty. # "Sorrow First A Habit, Then Convenience"

A Discussion of Man's Hesitance to Be "Born Again" at Easter.

By Elsie Robinson

OUT in the garden, digging. A gay, gusty day, with the warm soil smoking with new life and the twigs ruddy with the welling sap. There's a robin! Someone's burning leaves! Over in the sunniest corner, grape hyacinths are springing, blue as flame.

A grand, exciting time of the year, this, in my garden. Green blades breaking . . . gray buds bursting . . . everything in a flurry to be rid of winter and into the business of spring. Remember Robert Browning's singing lines—

The lark's on the wing;
The snail's on the thorn:

"The year's at the spring"—what a pity we humans can't take our seasons as healthily as the soil . . . be as willing to be done with December's fear and sorrow, as eager to take on April's hope and happiness. And we could! We have all the equipment in our own natures . . . the blessed ability to forget, cover our scars, send out new roots, be actually born again.

Why? Why does everything in the universe rush joyfully to the Easter except Man—while he usually has to be coaxed, kicked or given ether before he'll snap out of yesterday's misery? I suspect it's because sorrow so easily becomes first a habit, then a convenience—then, all too frequently, a racket!

We don't mean to get that way. We don't want to be cowards and quitters. But something happens. We lose our job. A friend fails us. The big romance goes wrong. The little chap dies. Suddenly we find ourselves knocked groggy—taking the count.

Presently, we assure ourselves, we'll Get Going Again. But just for a while we're bewildered. Or embittered. Everything's a mess. We can't get our bearings.

Then the worst of it passes. We could, we should, be back in line again. But we aren't. We find ourselves lagging . . . Why? We don't admit the reason. Chances are, we aren't consciously aware of it. But it's plain enough to the rest of the world.

We aren't back in line because, during the dark days, we've made a discovery. We've discovered that Grief and Bad Breaks can come in handy . . . be used as a hideout if we're afraid . . . as an alibi if we're lazy or generally cussed. Also, if one happens to crave coddling and attention, misfortune's a slick way to get it. People can't ignore you if you've had hard luck. They must listen . . . they must sympathize . . . OR ELSE!

So Unhappiness becomes a habit . . . a convenience . . . a racket . . . without our wishing or planning! Here's spring, with "the lark on wing"—yet there we sit, weeping over the old heartbreak, burning over the old disappointment, telling folks what a Dirty Deal we had during the depression!

Amazing, how many ways and reasons we mortals find for making messes of ourselves!

Salty Dried Beef

Taste the dried beef and see if it is very salty before cooking. If too salty it will spoil the creaming of the meat. It can be avoided by breaking the dried beef into cold water and allowing to stand for a few minutes. Drain and proceed as usual with the creaming.

LIVE ON A FARM AND LIKE IT!

HOW TO PLAN PAINLESS SUPPORT FOR YOUR DREAM ACRES, REVEALED BY A NOTED CITY DWELLER, COMMENTATOR, AND AGRARIAN

Illustrations by Capri.

LOWELL THOMAS

EVERY year at about this date I hear the same legend from some urban acquaintance or another: "You ought to see the wonderful farm we found!"

Last night as I was rushing for a train an excited friend grabbed my arm and told me about the 30 acres he had just bought. "There's an eight-room house, running water, chicken houses, barn, everything," he excitedly explained. "If I told you how low the rent is, you'd call me a liar. Five years from now I'm going to kiss the office good-by forever."

I have learned to anticipate the next sentence and speak it myself, so I interrupted:

"Of course. Five years from now you'll be making so much money out of the chickens (or cows or pigs or the vegetable garden) that you'll be able to retire and live the life of Riley."

"That's it," replies the enthusiast. "How did you know?"

I know because this "back-to-the-land" movement began a few years ago, and I'm by way of being an authority. Ten years ago I went back to the land. There are few counties from coast to coast, outside of the arid and mountain states, without their annual crop of novices and synthetic farmers. And, I have observed two phenomena: First, not one of my friends comes to me to report, "I am making so much money out of the chickens (or cows or pigs or vegetables) that I have retired."

For a second phenomenon, the man who thinks he is going to achieve a competence on a farm after five years (or even 10) is never one who grew up on a farm and knows what farm work is.

Now the last thing I would dream of trying to do is to discourage any potential "back-to-the-landers." It can't be done. And if it could, I wouldn't be the man to do it. I live on a farm myself whenever I can dash away from my work and for as long as I can keep away. And, after all, there is no harm done even when a city man discovers at the end of five years that his total profits from the chicken or vegetable business amount to some $50, maybe $50 minus. He and his have had more fresh air and exercise than they ever would have had otherwise. They have also gained experience, knowledge and had a darned good time.

The joys and excitement of an urban family are unique during the first few days after the moving men have unloaded the van at the country home. To be sure, the number of new appliances that have to be bought turns out to be twice as large as those careful calculations that were made before leaving the city. And then it is a bit of a drawback when the electric pump, which draws the water from the well, develops unaccountable attacks of paralysis. It's rather a chore hauling water from the nearest neighbor, a quarter of a mile away, until the electrician repairs the pump or convinces you that you need a new one. But such troubles are trifles: "one has to put up with a certain amount of roughing it to begin with."

You can hardly wait until you start to work on your garden. You look around for someone to do your plowing. He ought to be easy to find. But, you learn, the farmers in the vicinity are all busy on their own farms. When you finally discover one willing to spare you a few hours he assumes you are at least president of the First National Bank, and, into the bargain, rubs it in that he is doing you a great and unusual favor.

The soil, which you were assured was fertile and could be most profitably worked, turns out to need hundreds of pounds of lime and fertilizer. Somehow, it never occurred to you to ask why 15, 20 or 30 acres of rich and productive land was for rent at such a low figure, why, if it was so rich, some professional farmer was not occupying and making money out of it. When you have investigated that question you have begun to digest your first important lesson as a synthetic farmer.

. . . YOU ACQUIRE THE SUSPICION THAT THE CHICKEN BUSINESS IS AN INTRICATE AFFAIR.

Meanwhile, what about the chickens? Of course, you send to the Department of Agriculture and soon in possession of a small library of literature on the subject. You are hugely enthusiastic about the poultry houses already built on the place. But by the time you have studied some of the warnings furnished by Uncle Sam's poultry husbandmen, you realize that a repair or two is necessary. You send for a carpenter and the next thing a large quantity of lumber is being deposited on your grounds. By the time you have paid for it . . . and also the carpenter's bill . . . you discover that you have rebuilt another man's chicken houses for him and spent more money than it would have cost you to put up new ones. The chicks, bought at anywhere from $10 to $15 a hundred, prove to be infinitely more delicate than children and susceptible to a long list of peculiar diseases you never even heard about. If you reach the point where you actually have eggs or broilers to sell you also acquire the lesson that, as the prices you receive go down, the cost of mash and corn goes gaily up. Sooner or later you acquire the suspicion that the chicken and egg business is an intricate affair, rendered more difficult and vexatious because so many amateurs and novices plunge into it cheerfully and complicate the market for professionals.

. . . HE ASSUMES YOU ARE AT LEAST PRESIDENT OF THE FIRST NATIONAL.

Still and all, I am sure nothing I have said here will discourage any Tired Business Man who has the ambition to grow more tired operating a poultry or any other kind of a farm. None of my friends who turned to the land five years ago have returned to city life. One or two of them have even told me with great glee that during the last year their farms cost them nothing, "when you take into account all the fresh vegetables, fresh eggs and poultry we had."

The late Diamond Jim Brady used to say: "It's fun to be a sucker—if you can afford it." "People leave the country for the city so as to make money to be able to go back to the country."

But with all its drawbacks it's the life for me! With all its headaches it's still the nearest thing to the "life of Riley" that I've found.

The Technique Of Grafting Human Skin

By Dr. M. G. Seelig

IN THE good old days, one could count on the regularly recurring dramatic recital, in the daily press, of the partial re-surfacing of a patient with the generously donated skin of friends and relatives. Rarely did these journalistic stories get at the heart of the matter and tell just how the procedure of skin grafting was executed. The technique is so very simple that an unadorned description of it probably would have robbed these news items of their sentimental appeal.

Today such stories are rarely published, for the simple reason that we no longer rob Peter to pay Paul. Experience has taught us that only in the very exceptional instances will Paul's skin adhere and grow on Peter. Human beings, we believe, are grouped biologically in relation to their skin just as they are in relation to their blood. We were not able to transfuse blood successfully until we learned the tragic lesson that the blood of one individual may kill another one if transfused into his blood stream without first determining whether or not the bloods matched or tolerated each other. In other words, intolerance is not merely a matter of spirit but reaches deep down into the skin, bone, blood and vitals.

The body of one human being usually will not tolerate the skin of another person. In order to be sure that a skin graft will take, we therefore use the patient's own skin, transplanting it from some normal part of his body to the site that needs it. If we do this in accordance with the simple rules of good surgery, we can regularly count on the graft growing in its new place. It is not necessary to set down the various conditions that make skin grafting necessary; but it will not be without interest to know that there are skin grafts and skin grafts. If we desire to graft only a moderate sized area, we merely snip off tiny bits of skin with a curved scissors and lay them "buttered" side down on the region to be covered. When we have finished, the surface to be grafted is dotted with these tiny bits of skin that look so much like wheat seeds that we frequently call this process "seed grafting." The little seed of skin epithelium grow and fuse until they cover the entire area requiring grafting.

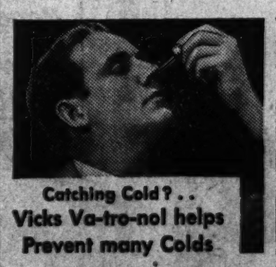

When a larger area has to be covered, we shave off tissue paper thin strips of skin about one inch wide and two to six inches long with a knife that looks like an old fashioned straight razor, and we lay the strips rawside down, until we have completely covered the area to be grafted. This type of graft is known as the split or Thiersch graft.

Sometimes we have to cover in defects that require thick grafts, and in such cases we dissect out a piece of full thickness skin, cut to a pattern that just fits the defect, and anchor it in its new place with a few stitches.

There are other modifications in technique and methods, but they all rest on the same principle, namely that a bit of skin shaved thin, or of full thickness may be transferred from one part of a patient's body to another part, and if the operation be done properly, the skin heals in its new bed within a week. During the period of healing in, the site from which the graft was taken also heals under a simple sterile dressing.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE.

"Sorry, Mr. Parrish. Hospital rules," and she whisked the blue bundle down into the cart which held six other blue bundles and pushed the cart quickly down the hall, rounding the curve at the end of the hall expertly.

"A fine state of affairs," Doug grumbled to Mimi as he went back into the room which she shared with another new mother. "A fine state of affairs when a father can't look at his son except through a glass wall. Can't hold his own son. What do they think I have—leprosy?"

But Mimi could hold the baby. She could hold his body close to hers, swaddled as it was in blankets. She could touch her lips to his smooth forehead, and to his cheeks which were so soft, and put her fingers to his lips and to the little button that was his nose, feel the fine down so brown so dark that was his hair. So little time to do it—for the nurse always came back for him so quickly—but she could do it, and when she was doing it tender waves of love flushed over her for her son.

She could wonder at the miracles that had made the small Douglas so like the big one, for when she was watching the boy, it seemed that she was watching his father. And it was good that she had two Douglas's, one the son, and one the father. The line of his forehead, the brown eyes, the way the little brows were formed above them, the chin—they were all the father's, they were all Doug's. Doug had stamped himself indelibly on his boy.

She could wait for them both, impatiently. Wait for the father who came before he went to work, then at noon for a few minutes, and for three long hours at night until one of the nurses came and told him sternly to go home. She could wait for the son, look every few minutes at the old watch which was on the table beside her bed. Five times during the day and night she had the son.

And he seemed so content with her. Sometimes when the nurse brought him in he was crying, that queer mewing cry, and when she had him in her arms he would quiet down and lie there as if he knew somewhere in his baby being that she was his mother and she loved him. He was always asleep when he left her, his eyes closed, and his fragil lashes on his cheeks.

"I tell you they don't handle him carefully enough. They bounce him into the cart when they take him back to the nursery. I've seen the nurses do it, bounce him," Doug complained.

"But, darling, they don't. They're used to handling babies, they know how to handle them. A baby isn't glass, you know." And she laughed at the worried frown on his face. But she knew how he felt, because she felt the same way. The other 40 babies in the nursery didn't count. It was only theirs, the forty-first who mattered, only theirs for whom the nursery had been built and was maintained. Only theirs whom the nurses should care for.

DOUG had to tell her every detail of the nursery which he saw from the corridor through the great plate glass window. He had to draw a picture of the room for her as he saw it, draw the little cribs one by one, and where the tables were and where the scales were, and most important where their baby was in relation to the other babies in the room. He had to describe the crib, just how it was, exactly how it looked, what color the blankets were each day when he came to look at it and tell her again and again about the name plate at the head which only had on it the number of her room.

It seemed a little cruel to both of them that their son was identified in the nursery only by the number of her room. Cruel, too, that on the white and blue bead necklace which clung to his chubby throat there was only the name "Parrish." Mimi would have liked his name to have been spelled out in full, Douglas Colvin Parrish, like his father, like his father's father.

"A fine baby." She liked to hear people say that. The nurses who brought young Douglas to her, the visitors she had, always Doctor Chapin's comment when he came twice a day.

It brought such pride, a physical pride that puffed through her, took all the weakness she was feeling away. Made her strong and confident, swelling with confidence.

A fine baby, a beautiful baby, people said. The finest baby in the world, the finest baby that ever lived or ever was born Mimi said to herself, and she knew Doug was saying the same thing to himself. They could only voice it aloud when she was home with the baby and the baby was in the bed she had prepared for it.

There was the little chart she had made out and which lay beside the old watch of Doug's—a chart of the baby's weight each day. Seven pounds that first day when she had been too dizzy and too weak to see the close resemblance to Doug. Then a little loss, a few ounces, then the seven pounds again, and now a gain every day. An ounce every day, and she felt as she looked at her chart that each ounce was a golden one, so proud was she of it.

She almost thought she should see the ounces stamped on the baby's face, but she didn't. The baby was the same, a little rounder perhaps, and some of the first redness gone.

WITH her neighbor in the adjoining bed, Mimi had little to say. At first she had tried to talk to the strange dark girl with sullen eyes and a cloud of black hair as dark as her eyes. But the girl didn't want to talk, she found out. She wanted to be let alone. There was a screen around her bed almost all day, and all the time any guests of Mimi's came.

Mimi knew her name, that was all. Mrs. Scrivener. Rhoda Scrivener. The surname the girl had told her herself. The given name she had discovered for herself from the greeting the girl's only visitor gave her every day.

The two babies came in together day and night, a blue bundle that was the Parrish boy and a pink bundle that was the Scrivener girl, one in the right arm of a nurse, one in the left.

Mimi had seen the pink bundle, she had held it the same as she had held her own blue bundle, and the eyes so deep in the pink blanket were as cloudy and sullen as the mother's, and the hair was a mass of soft dark curls and the lips were redder than her own son's. She knew as she studied the baby that it was going to be beautiful with the wild bold beauty that its mother had.

Because she knew, too, that the baby wasn't loved, she would reach out for it while her own baby was lying at her side, and the nurse who was taking it out of the room, would hand it to her for a moment, and she would have the two of them nestled to her, and the nurse would stand above her looking down at the girl child and saying nothing with her lips but a good deal with her eyes.

Mimi felt so close to the little girl who had no name as yet; close because it had been born an hour after her own son in the same room, with the same snow on the outside sills and during the same quiet storm. Sometimes when she and Mrs. Scrivener were alone in the room, she would look over at the screen that shielded the sullen face and the jet black hair and the full sensuous red lips, and she would wonder what life held for the tiny child and whether sometime in its life someone would take the baby and love it as it should be loved, as her own son was going to be loved with every fiber of her body and heart.

Then she would wonder what the future would hold for her boy, who was born under the same sky, under the same storm, under the same star as the other one.

"Let it be good!" she would murmur then. "Let it be good and kind, his future!"

Who Mrs. Scrivener's lone visitor was she didn't know, either, and if the nurses knew they didn't say, for there were strict rules against gossip in the hospital. The visitor was no husband, no eager husband asking about his daughter like Doug did about his son. The visitor was a middle-aged woman, not too smartly dressed, with a plain face and grayish hair.

She came promptly every day at 2 and stayed until 20 minutes after 2.— Mimi had timed her. There was never much said behind the screen when she was there, and what was said was whispered so Mimi couldn't hear it.

Nothing like her own gay guests coming and taking possession of the room, Flo bringing arm loads of roses, and Jack bringing a jumping jack for the baby, and Ruth a new book telling everything about raising a son and Bob explaining the book in detail. And Cliff's hearty laugh, and Ella's terse advice, and others coming and going on visiting hours, and Doug forgetting himself and laughing that loud ringing laugh of his that could be heard at the desk down the hall.

There were flowers in the room always except when the flower girl took them out at night, but all of them were Mimi's flowers, bowls of them, vases of them, pots of them, on the floor, on the dresser, on the long table by the window. Mrs. Scrivener had no flowers, and she didn't seem to want to look at Mrs. Parrish's.

All so different, and all so strange, and after six days the pink bundle came in no longer, but the lone visitor did.

Mimi missed the pink bundle, but she asked no questions, even when she and Mrs. Scrivener on the seventh day were side by side in wheel chairs at the room at the end of the corridor looking out on another storm that was just beginning.

The Effect of Past Wars on Man's Thoughts

By the Rev. J. F. Newton

WALTER HINES PAGE, our Ambassador to England during the World War—my friend in those years—tells in one of his letters of his boyhood in North Carolina, and of one thing he learned.

Hour after hour, as a boy, he used to listen to the veterans of the Civil War telling tales of battles long ago, memories which to him were history; and he recalls the effect of their talk:

"I have sometimes thought," he says, "that many of the men who survived that unnatural war wittingly did us greater hurt than the war itself. It gave every one of them the intensest experience of his life, and ever afterwards he referred every other experience to this.

"Thus it stopped the thought of most of them as an earthquake stops a clock. They were dead men, most of them, moving among the living as ghosts; and yet as ghosts they held the stage."

For them "is" and "will be" had no meaning, he goes on. Instead, they spoke of "was" and "used to be". Theirs was a living dead—they were men whose future was behind them, and they could not forget it.

Yes, they were happy sitting in the sunshine talking of Lee and Jackson, but the clever boy thought such memories dangerous; for men who live in the past are, unconsciously, enemies of hope.

No memory can be good for us—whether it be happy or horrible—which contains some past event so vivid that it makes the present pallid, and the future devoid of the hope of better things.

Yet how often we meet a person whose intensest experience is behind, and who dates everything from it, looking back. They simply do not see that life has gone on and left them in the past.

Often a great sorrow dates us, blotting out everything else. Or some dire calamity is the red-letter day in our callendar, the glow of which throws all other days into shadow for us.

To disregard the past is to remain a child; but to live in the past is a second childhood—and we never grow up.

Easter Sausage

One pound sausage meat, one finely chopped onion, one-half cup bread crumbs, one-half cup cold water, one egg, one teaspoon sugar. Mix thoroughly and season with salt and pepper. Form into potato-shaped rolls. Hide in the center of each roll hard-boiled egg quarters. Roll in crumbs. Fry in hot fat until well done and browned evenly. Serve for Easter Sunday breakfast on a bed of watercress.

Jigger Coat

NEW YORK.—The "jigger" coat is fashion news this season. It is the short, box coat of finger-tip length that is so practical to wear when long coats are unnecessary.

ON BROADWAY
By Walter Winchell

The Private Papers of a Cub Reporter.

Oscar Levant related this one to the Irving Berlins at the Beverly Brown Derby last night. An Eastern banker, it appears, and Levant, encounter each other only once every five years. . . . The other night they met again. . . . "Why is it?" queried the financier, "that I always hear you spoken of as an artist, but when I meet you—all you do is talk of money?" . . . To which Oscar replied: "That's because I have a deadly fear you are going to talk about art!"

Memo From My Girl Friday: "The boys around town must be digging up some oofly old books. This week the very Odd fellow had the gag about going to California for the winter 'and finding it' as well as a garbled version of 'be nice to the people on the way going up, etc.' . . . Another was handed a terribly stale quip and you published an O. Henry."

C. N. of a Los Angeles newspaper's radio dep't comments: "I am at a loss to understand why a certain Broadway columnist rhapsodizes Clem McCarthy's account of the Santa Anita Handicap. 'It confused me." . . . That's the first time, we think, we have been scolded for giving anyone a good notice. . . . Oliver Reginald Taviner was taking it easy. He was touring the countryside in a pretty trailer. Not that he is rich—he has just enough coin to float and not be concerned about work. . . . So what happened? . . . So Harry Brand of the Zanuck firm put him to work writing a scenario. . . . "Why," said Brand to this column, "should he loaf and be happy?"

The Mayfair set in London are now wolfing sausages and sipping beer at suppers, instead of caviar and champagne. . . . This makes it nice for the starving peasants, who now know the taste of the stuff they are wishing they had. . . . The lobbyists in Washington, who earn their keep by needling Legislators into passing their kind of laws, could have picked up some useful pointers at the Cinema Academy awards. . . . Boy! THERE was organization! . . . The title of Darryl Zanuck's picture "Wake Up and Live" (taken from Dorothea Brande's best-selling book) cost Twentieth Century-Fox $22,500.

Our Thank-You Dep't: Patricia Bradley, editor of the radio notes in Stage magazine, in discussing the Fred Allen-Jack Benny radio feud, adds: "They were having one of those friendly mud-pie slinging fueds of the sort that Walter Winchell and Ben Bernie have carried over the air and print for so many years" . . . For nearly five, Patricia.

The British Critics are putting the blast on our Mr. George Jean Nathan for his uncomplimentary remarks about John Gielgud's "Hamlet" in N. Y. . . . They spanked Nathan for referring unkindly to Gielgud's nose, and one of them (Sydney W. Carroll) told him to "keep Gielgud's schnozz out of Nathan's business." . . . Ice photographs black on the movie screens. . . . So in "One in a Million" they painted the ice milk white. . . . What they do about Mae West's jewelry I have no idea. . . . Eddie Cronjager who just photo'd his 12lst feature film, told the columa that if Fred Astaire were in the "silents" he would have flopped and wouldn't be in the talkies today. . . . Because in the silent times footage sped at the rate of 60 feet per minute. Now it is 90 feet per minute. . . . Meaning, the faster the camera grinds, the slower the action. . . . That's why you can see Astaire's intricate stepping. . . . At the old speed it would blur.

Rudyard Kipling, in his autobiog, urged writers to "bear serenely with imitators," on the ground that they eventually betray themselves. He told of how he once trapped a counterfeiter who posed as an authority on natural life. So Kipling invented a tree in one of his stories, and pretty soon he detected his carbon copy describing the imaginary tree and how it lived and got along with its cousins. Kipling didn't expose the phoney, but just enjoyed the satisfaction of knowing him for a no-good. . . . But we doubt that the good Rudyard would have been quite so patient if he spawned a daily column, and had it raided regularly. . . . He would have learned that a column burglar would not be satisfied just to filch the tree. . . . The burglar would also want to chase Kipling out of its shade!

The Great Dane

By Albert Payson Terhune

THE Great Dane is one of the most magnificent and powerful dogs ever evolved. Though he is credited commonly with Danish ancestry, I have read repeatedly that he has nothing of Denmark about him. (This is the finding of wiser experts than I.) How the term, "Dane," chanced to be applied to the splendid brute, by Buffon, I never have been able to learn.

The Great Dane seems to have started his known career in Germany, centuries ago; as the descendant of crossbreed mastiffs and Irish wolfhounds or such other huge breeds. He was used for hunting big game. Of later days, he has been kept as a pet and a guard.

Undoubtedly there is a strong admixture of hound in his makeup. Now that several states ban the cropping of dogs' ears, his aural appendages no longer stand high like spear-points; but hang as low and as limply as do the average hound's. And his expression is changed vastly, thereby. In almost precisely his present general aspect, he can be found in German prints of several centuries ago.

A wonderful dog, a wonderful pal. But don't keep him in a city. He needs and deserves all the free outdoor exercise he can get.

Shamrock Cutlets
(Deep Fried)

Two cups milk.
Two egg yolks.
One and one-half cups tuna fish.
One tablespoon minced parsley.
Two tablespoons minced green peppers (optional).
Two-thirds teaspoon salt.

Melt the butter. Add flour. When it is thoroughly mixed add the milk. Cook slowly, stirring constantly until a very thick sauce forms. Cook two minutes. Add rest of the ingredients. Cook one minute. Cool. Take tablespoons of the mixture and roll in the crumbs, then in the egg and again in the crumbs. Shape shamrock fashion. Chill until serving time. Fry in deep hot fat until the shamrocks are well browned. (About five minutes.)

One egg.

A delicious maple sauce to serve with waffles may be made by cooking half a pound of maple sugar with one cup of milk and half a cup of cream and boiling it for two minutes. Serve warm.

Stuffed Eggs

Cut hard-cooked eggs into halves. Remove and mash the yolks. Add to the yolks some chopped cooked ham, tongue, anchovies or sardines. Mix in a bit of mayonnaise and lemon juice. Roughly refill the white cases and top them with pickle relish.
